Lansdowne Says This Is No Time for Mediation in War - Balfour Dodges Fiscal Issue Skilfully.

LONDON, Feb. 14.-The first day's proceedings in Parliament lent rather a decided impression in the lobbies that the government will manage to hold out till the end of the session. The government's legislative programme, which is devoted in the main to social reforms, will be fairly popular, while the avoidance of difsicult questions like that of the redistri-P butjon of seats and Premier Balfour's firmness in thrusting aside the fiscal problem, all will tend in the same di-

On the other hand, the Liberals appear to be as distant as ever from any approach to unanimity on the vexed question of the leadership. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, Earl Spencer, Herbert Henry Asoulth and Sir Henry Hartley Fowler, all are spoken of as possible leaders of the next Liberal ministry, to say nothing of Lord Rosebery's even superior claim to that position, should be be inclined to exert his influence.

Everything will depend upon Mr. Balfour's success in holding his followers together and overcoming the apathy born of the knowledge that the whole country is looking for and expecting a general

The position of Sir Anthony MacDonnell. under-secretary for Ireland, in the Unionist councils, threatens to bring a storm about the government's head, MacDonnell is credited with being responsible for Secretary Wyndham's more liberal policy toward Ireland, and is accordingly hated by the Ulater section of the Irish Unionists, who, led by Sir Edward Carson, are doing their utmost to overthrow him.

At a meeting of Irish Unionists today a resolution was adopted censuring Mr. Wyndham for "abdicating his position and responsibility in favor of a subordinate official with a policy of his own. directed to destroying the basis of Irish unionism." and protesting against the covernment's permitting such an abuse of

No Time for Mediation in War.

At the resumption of business in the House of Lords, Lord Chancellor Salisbury read the King's speech, and the Marquis of Winchester, Conservative, moved the address in reply.

Earl Spencer, the Liberal leader, referred to the war in the Far East. He aid it was the most carnest desire of the people of Great Britain to see the end of the conflict, and he trusted His Majesty's government would not lose a fair and proper opportunity to bring the conflict a peaceful solution.

Foreign Secretary Lansdowne expressed his sorrow and concern at the continuance of the war in the Far East, and said that, should an opportunity for bringing it to a close present itself, the government would avail itself thereof with slacrity, but an attempt at intervention now would mean retarding the very object desired.

Narrowly Escaped War. Great Britain had endeavored, not us successfully, to maintain the strictest neutrality.

la regard to the most difficult and embarrassing question of contraband, the government, Lord Lansdowne conlinued, had upheld the wise and timehonored policy of securing the narrowest possible restrictions of the definition of contraband articles. It was satisfactory to have been able to arrive at a reasonable modus vivendi, Since July not a single British vessel and been interfered with except where clearly a blockade-runner.

Referring to the North Sea incident, Lord Lansdowne said that once, and only once, were they near being drawn into the vortex of war. He need hardly say it arose in connection with the North Sea incident, to which he only referred because he desired to acknowledge the kindly remarks of Earl Spencer, who had congratulated the government upon its conduct of the negotiations following the Dogger Bank affair.

Reform in Macedonia.

Speaking on the subject of Macedonia, Lord Lansdowne said there was a conensus of opinion among the spowers in favor of drastic reforms, and a scheme would be proposed which, he boped, would meet with sympathetic criticism. The troubles in Macedonia were not merely a case of Turkish mismanagement, which might be ended by a stroke of the pen, but the conditions in Macedonia were not equaled in the civilized world at the moment. Russia and Austria, upon whom the powers conferred a mandate to deal with the Macedonian problem, have put forward a new scheme of reform, which is under discussion. But the Poreign Secretary was unable to present it in detail to the House. The British government was satisfied that it made a step in advance.

Lord Lansdowne also referred to the Anglo-French agreement. He said it had been of no little value in settling many difficulties.

In referring to South Africa, the Foreign Secretary said that the British government was prepared to give the Transvaal first and the other colonies later, not self-government, but representative institutions.

Touching upon the Thibet expedition. Lord Landowne said that the attitude of the government toward Thibet had Younghusband (the British political ance of the royal procession, a agent who headed the mission) had transgressed his instructions when he arranged for British forces to remain in the Cumbi district for 75 years, and Majesty's government.

The Foreign Secretary declined to enter into an explanation of the negotiations with Afghanistan. He said it would not be desirable at the present time to lay the papers before the House.

The Secretary briefly referred to the naval and military situation saying the naval and military situation saying the have figured in all the state processions departments were moving as rapidly as of recent years. The Household Cavalry consistent with wisdom. In regard to acted as a bodyguard, while in pursuance alien immigration, the Secretary said it of their privilege a detachment of yeomen was clearly indicated by the sentiment that the government must deal with the situation thoroughly.

In conclusion, Foreign Secretary Lansdowne returned to the redistribution bill, which he said could not be passed at the present session.

After a few words from Lord Goschen, Liberal, the address was agreed to and the House of Lords adjourned.

Fiscal Question Is Raised.

The House of Commons assembled for ness at 4 o'clock. Joseph Cnamberlain, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, A. J. Balfour and other favorites were warmly greeted by their respective supporters. The new members who took the uded Harry Marks (who success the late James Lowther as representative of the Island of Thanet), but as he had not brought the official return of his election, Mr. Marks had to leave the House until he obtained it.

W. A. Mount, Conservative, and Samuel Roberts, Conservative, seconded the adiress in reply to the King's speech. The first division approaching party lines oc-curred in the House of Commons when Mr. Dalviei (Liberal) moved that the House censure Lord Arlington for breach of privilege by his action in the North Premier Balfour said nothing could be gained by continuing the discussion and moved the previous question, which was carried. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader in the house, speaking of Mr. Mount's motion, bitterly assailed the ing room, the procession was reformed, government, which, he said, was evading and their majesties returned to the the fiscal question, as shown by the fallure of the mover of the address to refer to it. He said that the opposition would shortly endeavor to secure a straight answer from Premier Balfour, showing whether or not be was in agreement with Joseph Chamberialn's proposals. He continued almost up to 7:30 P. M., when Sir Edgar Vincent, Conservative, took up the debate and was speaking when the house suspended its sitting.

The first bour and a baif of the night session was taken up with desultory speeches in the debate upon the address in reply to the speech from the throne. Premier Balfour rose at 10:30 o'clock to reply to Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, Mr. Balfour justified the government's action in Thibet, said it was the Minis-try's earnest desire to maintain the friendliest relations with Afghanistan and that negotiations were proceeding satis-factorily: touched on Chinese labor in South Africa and repeated Lord Lans-downe's pronouncement with regard to the future of the South African colonies. He also defended the sugar convention Replying to Sir Henry Campbell-Banner-man's assertion that the government was too feeble to carry out an effective policy, Mr. Balfour said the decision lay entirely with the House of Commons whether it could effectively carry out the mandate of the people and the duties in-trusted to it by the sovereign.

Mr. Balfour protested against bringing the fiscal question before this Parliament and said it was entirely irrelevant. He was unable, he said, to make his po-sition clearer than he already had done, He taunted the opposition on the existing confusion concerning its future pro-

The House of Commons adjourned at

H. H. Asquith will move the following: We humbly represent to Your Majesty that the various aspects of the fiscal question have been fully discussed in the country for nearly two years, and that the time has come for sub-mitting the question to the people without fur-

Th the Balkans, says the situation continues to give cause for anxiety. The measures adopted at the instance of the Austro-Russian governments have been instru-mental in bringing about some amelioration in the state of the disturbed dis tricts, but "these measures have still to be supplemented by radical reforms, especially of the financial system, before any permanent improvement can be effected in the administration of these provinces of the Turkish Empire.

The speech noted with satisfaction that the Austro-Hungarian government had addressed to the Porte proposals for this purpose, and added that the British gov-ernment was in communication with the powers concerned upon this important

Cong. atulatory references were made to the visit of the King and Queen of Portugal to England, to the ratification of the Anglo-French Convention, and to the arbitration agreements with Sweden and Norway, Portugal and Switzerland. The speech also mentioned the international commission, "intrusted with the investigation of the circumstances con-nected with the disaster to British trawiers which resulted from the action of the Russian fleet in the North Sea, and of apportioning the responsibility for this deplorable incident."

The King expressed the hope that the steps to establish a representative constitution for the Transvaal would result in substantial progress toward the ulti-mate goal of complete self-government. The King referred to the Thibetan ex-pedition, to the exchange of visits be-tween representatives of Lord Curson of Kedleston, the Vicercy of India, and the Ameer of Afghanistan, to discuss quer-tions affecting the relations of the two governments, and concluded with mengovernments, and concluded with men-tioning the proposals for the redistribu-tion of Parliamentary seats to be laid be-fore the Commons, the alten bill to be introduced, and the legislation dealing with the unemployed, besides other im-ortant legislation.

More than usual interest attaches to today's opening of Parliament, as the belief is practically universal that it will be the last session of the present Parliament. Even should the government escape defeat. It is thought that Premier Balfour will voluntarily dissolve Parliament in the Autumn and take the Parliament in the Autumn and take the opinion of the country on the fiscal and other questions now agitating the elec-

The scenes in the neighborhood of Buckingham Palace were particularly ani-mated. Large crowds selected these points to view the pageant. When the sovereigns issued from the gates of the palace they were greeted with a great burst of enthusiasm, which quickly spread the whole length of the fine new processional road leading from the site of the Victoria Memorial to the Horse Guard Parade, and accompanied the monarch and his escort through the route. At the royal entrance beneath the Vic-toria tower of the House of Lords, the King was received by the high officers of Co-Operative Plano Buying Makes Owning a Fine Piano Possible for All.

While the co-operative piano clubs are growing rapidly day by day, the people outside this city do not seem to comprehend the power of this co-operative plantas scores of inquiries seem to attest.

Now let us take this plan up thoroughly once more: First of all, it is not new. It is not even new to the piano business. The Ellers Plano House itself, in several of its stores, brought about a saving to the piano-buyers of thousands of dollars in the piano-buyers and thousands of dollars in the piano clubs of 1962 and 1968. But never heretofore was it undertaken on so large a scale and with practically the entire Eners line of pianos, including the costliest of Chickerings and Kimbails, and also the Webers.

Co-operation is nothing more nor less than the strongest business principle in operation today, and as such it cannot be put into force too often. It would apply to shoes, groceries or books just as well as to pianos. If you bought a hundred pairs of shoes or if a hundred of you give an order for one pair of shoes each, through some purchasing agent, you would get them cheaper than you do where each of you buys separately.

That is all there is to our co-operative Plano Club Sale. But in proportion as the price of a pain of shoes, so in just that

That is all there is to our co-operative Plano Club Sale. But in proportion as the price of a plano is greater than the price of a pair of shoes, so in just that same proportion is the co-operative saving on a plano that much greater than would be the co-operative saving upon a pair or two of shoes.

The average plano is ninety times as costly as the average pair of shoes, and the co-operative saving is ninety times as great. We have figured that a saving of from $75 to $150 on the average plano can be made on a co-operative purchase of 1000 planos; and we absolutely guarantee that we will make you the saving of at least $75 on any plano you may choose. We give you thirty makes of famous planos to choose from, and we offer the smallest of deposits and the casiest of terms on your purchase.

Think of buying one of the Club "A" planos at $1.25 a week, at a saving too, of at least $18 on a regular new and warranted $200 plano!
