SETTING NEW CASING IN OIL WELL-A new four-inch from casing is being set inside the six-inch casing of the oil well on S. I. Ogden's farm on the Peninsula. The new four-inch casing will effectually shut out the water that has interfered with the operation of the drill, and drilling may now go ahead without interference. The well is now encouraging. Other experts, who have visited the well and examined the sand taken from the bottom, also think the taken from the bottom, also think the prospects are good. It may yet take 500 feet more of drilling before the oil vein proper will be reached, but the promoters are prepared to go down until they find oil, or know there is none to find.

Population of St. Johns.-From the cent census of the school population of district No. 2, St. Johns, the population of that new city is estimated above 2000. School Clerk Tranch has completed the school census. The number of children of ages between 4 and 20 years is given of ages between and by years is a ven at $50, which is a gain of 250 over the number last year. Probably no district in the state shows so great an increase in population in a single year as St. Johns, Mr. Tranch extended his figures and makes estimates of population, with-out counting the transients, or employes in the factories, showing the population as 1829. Taking the actual residents of Johns the population is shown to be much greater, not under 2000, and pos-sibly several hundred more. These figures more than justify the prediction made by Councilman T. J. Monahan a year ago that the population of St. Johns would be above 2000 in January, 1905, and would be probably 10,000 in less than five years. OUTSIDE MINISTERS TO COME IN .- Rev.

W. S. Holt, D. D., synodical missionary for the Presbyterians of this state, is making arrangements to have all the Presbyterian missionary ministers of Oregon attend the Chapman meetings, which start March 22. He is arranging for their entertainment for four or five days each among the Presbyterian families of this city and is also securing special transportation rates. There are about 75 ministers who, come under this head. He is now asking for the names of families who will furnish entertainment for these ministers while they are in Portland. Baptists are also arranging for their ministers in this state and Washington to visit Portland and take in the Chapman meetings.

Young Man From The Dalles Booked at Police Station.

A young man sat in the rear of the police station all day yesterday talking earnestly to a young woman hardly out of her toens, holding a three months' beby in her arms. Captain Gritzmacher sat In her arms. Captain Gritzmacher sat forward in the police station and felt sorry for all three of them. The young man, who gave his age as 18, when his name went down on the docket, was a good-looking, well-dressed fellow, and the wife who sat looking sorrowfully at him was good-looking, too. He was C. L. Hall, late of The Dailes, and did not deny it when Detectives Kerrigan and Snow took him and his young wife and baby into custody as they got off the O. R. & N. train yesterday morning. A telegram had come from Chief of Police A. B. Wood. of The Dailes to hold Hall until he arrived, which he did on the evening train. So all day the two sat looking at each other sorrowfully, while the third stuck.

What the young man told the young

What the young man told the young woman was something like this:
"Keep up your courage. I had to run from The Dailes, and it looks pretty bad now with the police on my trail, but I'll straighten up matters all right."

And the young woman seemed to take courage and keep her faith in the boy talking to her, for she grew less meianeboly as the day progressed, and when the officer of the law arrived from The Dailes she was quite brave.

Hall had come to The Dailes a little while ago, with a wife and small baby on his hands and little moorey. His expenses outran his income, and before long he had a muititude of small debts. He bought an interest in a milk route, and that did not prosper, and the time came

Owing to the unusual interest which the public has taken in "Old Heidel-berg," as presented by the Columbia players, Manager Ballard decided to re-peat it for the first half of the present

For the first time in the history of lo cal stock companies, the same bill was presented for a second time at the Sunday opening yesterday, and the audienand night were as large and appreclative as a week ago. The perfor mance was much improved over that given a week ago and was as free from hitches as a first-class road production. "Old Heidelberg" is the high-water mark for stock in Portland and should enjoy a prosperous repeat-engagement.
"Aristocracy" will be presented Thursday night and will complete the week.

On arrival they went to his room in the Stewart Hotel, and were discovered there by him. They expected him to sheller and the prices and the public action of their uncle, J. J. Fitzsimmors.

WOULD NOT DO

Why Seattle Band Was Not Engaged.

MADE NO OFFER DIERKE

Telegram From the Northern City Announcing Such a Proposition is Pronounced Rubbish by Local Musical Manager.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 5.—(Special.)

-Charles Dierke wanted T. H. Wagner, of this city to send 20 of the best out of his band to Portland to play with an organization that Dierke was to make up of Seattle and San Francisco musicians.
Dierke told Wagner that no Portland musician would be in the band. The soloists were to be brought from the East. Dierke offered Wagner $55 a man a week for the 20 men and $75 a week for Wagner if Wagner would bring his entire musical library with him.

Wagner would bring his entire musical library with him.
Wagner declined the offer, because it would break up his band in Seattle and would take his library out of the city so that the men, he left behind could not get engagements. Wagner said he would consent to such an arrangement only if the Portland musicians asked him for help, because the Portland musicians helped him out here three years ago during the Elks' carnival.

ing the Elks' carnival.

Wagner later wrote to the sercetary of the Fair, offering to take his entire band of 40 pieces to Portland for $1500 a week and transportation, to play as long as required. He received word that his proposition had been submitted to the committee on music. He has heard noth-ing further from Dierke or the Fair man-

"I made no effort to engage musicians from Mr. Wagner," said Mr. Dierke last night when shown the dispatch from Seattle. "I was in Seattle early last month on business, and while there was present at a rehearsal of Mr. Wagner's band. Not the entire band was present—perhaps some 14 or 15 players were there—some had new instruments and there were some poor players among tham. There were also, as in all cities like Seattle and Fortland and other places, a number of ciever land and other places, a number of ciever. land and other places, a number of clever players, but as a band those that I beard at that time would not do. Mr. Wagner did ask me if I could use some of his musicians, and I told him that there were one or two that might do, but as for try-ing to make a deal for 39 players, that's all rubbish. There were not 30 players present at the rehearsal.

"I made Mr. Wagner no offer for musicians. We talked about the music for the Lewis and Clark Fair, and I told him that I was going to engage my soloists from the East, and that I would go to San Francisco and secure my musicians, rehearse them for about four weeks and then bring them to Portland by boat. I did not say there would be no Portland musicians in the band. It is hard to get musicians in the band. It is hard to get local musicians, for they are all engaged, and they would not break their engagements, which run through the Summer, in order to join my band.

There must be some mistake about that library business. Mr. Wagner asked me if I had one, but that I expected to add to it either by seading to Chicago or getting more music while in San Francisco. He told me I could use his, but we have not discussed the matter since. There must be some mistake. be some mistake. Chicago."

The question as to the feasibility of al ownership was taken up before Knights of Pythias Hall last ever Thomas N. Strong read a long treatise on the good results of municipal owner-ship in cities where it had been tried. "Municipal ownership does not mean the sacrificing of rights of certain in-dividuals, but is simply the retention of that which rightfully belongs to the people," said Mr. Strong. He eited the example of Berlin, which practically controls its street railway system, in comparison with Chicago and other Ameriparison with Chicago and other American cities. In the course of his reading Mr. Strong incidentally remarked that he would rather own the electric street railway franchise of Portland than all the wealth owned by any three of Portland's richest citizens if taken from a strictly business standpoint.

"We all talk of the liberty and inde-pendence of the American citizen which characterized our forefathers, yet we are not the equal of the Russian serfs are not the equal of the Hussian seris who are rising against that outthroat, the Caar," said J. D. Stevens, in discussing municipal ownership. "We are taxed un-justify from—our infancy until we are buried beneath the earth's soil, with buried beneath the earth's soil, with hardly a protest."

"The fares on street-cars not only should be reduced, but we should be allowed to ride for nothing," said H. D. Wagnen, who took a hand in the discussion. If such was the case residences located on the outskirts of cities would be worth as much as homes and lots situated in more central locations. While not so had the system of taxation in not so bad, the system of taxation in not so had, the system of taxation in Portland resembles the taxation in Mex-ico. In certain cities of that country the people are taxed H5 for marriage, and H5 for burial licenses. Here professional men are taxed and corporations practical-
