Apparitions Warn Hapsburgs and Hohenzollerns of Death, and Most Ghosts Are Women.

The report that Queen Elizabeth has again been seen promenading the library of Windsor Chatle recalls the curious fact that, with but one solliary exception, these restless royalties who cannot sleep peacefully in their graves are women. It is now just five years since Queen Bess was last caught in the act of revisiting her old palace at Windsor, and the circumstances were these: A young officer of the Guards was reading one evening in the library when he saw a woman clad from head to heels in black, walk slowly across the library and pass into an adjacent room, says the Chicago Chronicie. The officer, moved by curiosity at such an unexpected sight, followed the lady, and to his amazement found that she had vanished as completely from view as if the floor had swallowed her, and this, although the only exit from the room was peacefully in their graves are women ough the only exit from the room was o one through which he had followed the Castle of Windsor in royal spocks. Catherine of Arragon, in spite of her not too pleasant memories of her husband. Henry VIII., is said still to walk in black attire-taper in hand-down one of the staircases and to disappear through the "Queen's Gate," and, more disconcerting will henry's second Catherine has, so till, Henry's second Catherine has, so they say, been seen rushing along a cor-ridor with streaming hair and white ap-parel, closely pursued by equally unsub-stantial soldiers bent on capturing her.

This is supposed to be a re-ensetment of a scene which actually took place not many days before Catherine Howard's death on Tower Hill in 1542. The unhappy Queen, who was then a prisoner in a coon adjoining the long miles. happy Queen, who was then a prisoner in a room adjoining the long gallery, escaped from her guards and rushed away to throw herself at the feet of her royal husband and beg for mercy. She was pursued by her guards, who caught her at the door of the chapel before where Henry was praying, and dragged her hack again to her prison chamber.

Ill-fated Anne Eoleyn does not seem to have ended her troubles on the block at the tower, for has she not been seen driv-

the tower, for has she not been seen drivthe tower, for has she not been seen div-ing down the avenue of Blickley Park be-hind four headless horses, driven by an equally incomplete coachman? And fair Rosamend seems doomed to walk o' nights along the river bank at Godstone, awaiting her royal lover, who never keeps his tryst. But English royalties have by no means a monopoly of post-morten perambula-tion. There is a certain beautiful white lady, very fair and queenly, who is said to haunt the rooms and corridors of the castle of Schonbrunn. Fair as the vision te, her appearances are never welcomed, for they are said always to herald a death in the imperial family of Austria. She was seen in 1867, just before Maximilian, who tried to set up a throne in Mexico, and brother of the Austrian Emperor, was shot, and again before the deaths of Archduke Rudolph and his mother, the

The royal house of Prussia also has its "white lady." who is only seen in the palace at Berlin before the death of some member of the religning family. Unlike her sister of Schonbrunn Castle, however, this white lady of Germany is said to be ill-favored, if not downright repulsive, and instead of a torch or scepter, she navies in her hand a common or domestic broom. Hence she has been irreverently christened "the sweeper."

christened "the sweeper."

There are white ladies attached to other European courts, notably that of Hesse-Darmstadt, the woman who impired Wagners "Lobengrin," but the oddest of all these royal wraiths is certainly the red man, who confines his patronage to the royalties of France.

He used to dog the steps of Catherine De Medici, wife of one French King and mother of three, along the corridors at the Tuillaries; he had a long interview, so it is chemiciled with the great Narpoleon the Tuilieries; he had a long interview, so it is chronicled, with the great Napoleon before he started on his ill-starred Rus-sian campaign, and it may have been through not following the specter's ad-vice that Napoleon had such a sorry homeooming, and it is reported that he was seen by the Empress Eugenie shortly hefore final disaster overtook the house of Napoleon.
