Fragments of Bodies Found.

At the ruins tonight hundreds of men drenched to the skin by the rain toiled unceasingly amid the half-burned timbers for fragments of fiesh and bone which, when found, were hurried to the morgue to be scanned by those waiting there. That the 65 dead represent the total number of victims no one familiar with the disaster believes. It is extremely doubtful, however, that more than fragmen-tary pieces of other bodies will ever be

Medical Examiner Paine said tonight that he believed other bodies had been reduced to sabes and that the number of victims might never be positively known. He did not believe that further identifications of the charted remains at the morgue were probable. Every body which had on it a trinket or place of clothing has been more or less positively identified. Remains which have been placed in boxes and marked "unknown" are in such a state that there is no possibility of their being recognized.

Today the first of the funerals of the victims was held, Governor Doublas being among those who followed the body to the grave. The funeral was that of Jerome Mayo, a finisher in the factory and brother-in-law of C. L. Fish, a close friend of the Governor.

A public service for the victims will be held Thursday afternoon in the City The.

inding of a watch the rubber heel of a shoe and a torn plece of clothing, all of which were shown to Mrs. Rockwell, the wife of the engineer, and were identified by her as belonging to her husband. Then the police found a part of a chair with a pelvis of a human frame in it, from which they inferred that Rockwell was sitting beside his boiler when the explosion came and was instantly killed. The police today, in explaining the failure of a number of employes to report their escape, cited an instance which indicated to them that many of the workmen were dazed after the explosion. Joseph Jones, employed in the stitching-room, escaped with a few bruises. In a confused state of mind he walked to another shoe factory in the city, applied for and was given employment, and in a mechanical way he worked through the day. Not until he returned to his home and found his family mourning him as dead was the man's brain cloar enough to enable him to recall the incidents of the day.
