Sacramento Valley Desires to House Exhibit in Historic Landmark.

Historic old Sutter's Fort is to be built in replica at the Lewis and Clark Exposi-tion, in which to house the exhibit from Sacramento Valley, California, if plans ande by the Sacramento Valley Development Association are successful. At a recent meeting of the association the re-production of the old fort was recommended and plans were ordered drawn, to be submitted to the Board of Control of the valley for approval. The San Fran-cisco Call has the following account of the association's meeting:

At a meeting of the Sacramento Valley Development Association today, a resolution was passed ordering and providing means whereby architects will at once draw up plans for the construction of a model of Sutter's fort at construction of a model of Sutter's fort at Portland, and the rebuilding of the main building of the fort of the same size and identical in every respect with the original building. It is preposed to construct the building, as it is connected with the finding of gold in California, It is distinctive, and is the most historic structure in the Sacramento Valley.
