Mystery of Headless Man Is Unsolved.

A MAFIA VICTIM

Many Italians See Countryman's Body Without Recognition, but He is Believed to Be Stubborn Witness in Trial.

BAN FRANCISCO, April 6.-Tonight the police of the city are working upo a murder mystery which promises to develop into the equal of those which have made San Francisco famous.

Ever since the time late last night when the headless, armiess and legless body of an Italian, about 22 years old, was found, still quivering, a moment after it had been dropped by an unknown, every effort has been made to learn the identity of the victim, the murderers, and the motive which prompted the deed.

The head, arms and legs of the man on Vallejo and Powell streets last night were picked up by two boys in the bay near Meiggs' wharf this afternoon. The head was that of a young man, an Italian, and it is the belief, although the head has not yet been identified, that it is that of Rossrio Domina, who appeared as a witness in the case of Gulseppi Brogado for murder which took place on January 21 last.

The feet and head were in a sack in which was a coat of the dead man. The whose dismembered remains were found on Vallejo and Powell streets last night

It is the impression of the police that Domina met his death because of his per-elatence in refusing to alter his testimony in the Brogado case.

The indications are that the man was murdered last night while he was at supper. The autopsy surgeen today found spaghetti in the throat.

was the employment of bloodhounds, rare occurrence in city detective work. While the dogs assisted in the finding of a number of blood-stained spots in the neighborhood, they did not produce any new clews that led to new developments. The course of the dogs was followed by an excited throng of several thousand people who greatly hampered the movements of the intelligent animals. The police were unable to cope with the

Two boys came and partly removed the blanket and a shawl. The headless trunk lay revealed The cries of the boys brought out the neighbors. Then a essage was sent to the police station.

Officers came, but they were confused and time was lost. The man who had borne this dripping thing along had gone. He could be traced back some distance by drops and splashes of blood, but the ghastly trail was lost.

Mafia Is Mentioned.

It is the fact that the murdered man was an Italian or Sicilian that at once brought the word "Mafia" to the detectives lips. If this organization, reported to be very strong in San Francisco, was the instigator of the flendish crime, the police will doubtless find a thousand ob-stacles put in their way, and amateur investigators who get too curious will find themselves in positive danger. All of the best detectives under Captain Burnett are working on the case. It is strange that in all the multitude of Ital-ians which filed past the slab in the morgue not one recognized the man, but the features were naturally distorted. The red blanket around the body was tied with heavy twine, and the knots used were those made by fishermen. On the head today were two long gashes in the scalp, and one of the eyes was closed from the force of a blow.

In searching through the coat tonight, the police found that the label contained the word "Denver." This was the only

The three bloodhounds which were put upon the track were greatly hampered in their work by thousands of curious appectators. After nosing about the spot where the body had been deposited, they darted through an opening leading to a blacksmith shop and stable far in the rear and which is run by V. Canton. Detectives followed the dogs and were startled to find that the animals went directly to pieces of boxwood which were bespattered with what appears to be hu-man blood. The dogs circled around and around and then dragged their followers back to the street, across and up Vallejo street. Here, just near the ourbing, were found more blood spots, indicating that the murderer had shifted the body and allowed some of the blood to trickle to the ground. Up the street the dogs raced, over last year's receipts, ollowed by a throng that yelled and houted: "They are on the trail!" At Vallejo and Mason streets the dogs urned on Mason street and went north, ceping to the right.

With noses to the ground they lumbered along until a little green gateway, labeled 1614 Mason street, was reached. Here they paused and pawed at the gate and the detectives opened it. The dogs jumped into the yard and circled around and snifted, then appeared confused. They halted at a garbage can, but soon one made for the rear entrance to 1618 Mason street. When the detectives came to the doorway they-looked down and there they saw four drops of blood, human gore, and evidently fresh. Through the doorway the hounds went and such of the officers followed as could crowd into the narrow place. At the front door, which is not lar from the rear entrance, the hounds halted.

The bloodhounds then went out of the building and towards Green street. Here they ran right up to the door at 731 Green street, which is a vacant flat. Sand had been sprinkled on the doorstep vory lately, for the prevailing high winds had not blown it away, and on the door near the handle were two very distinct flager marks stained into the wood in blood. handle were two very distinct finger marks stained into the wood in blood. VICTORIA, B. C., April 6.-Defendant's ounsel began their innings in the Hopper Dunemuir will case today, and E P. Davis, K. C., grilled the actress. He said her case could not succeed unless court could be made to believe defendant's witnesses were perjurers.

The evidence of Edna Wallace Hopper was not to be believed at all, because she was contradicted by men whom the court must believe. Her career as an actresa made a thorough search of the premises, but there was no sign of it having been used lately. Meanwhile the dogs were outside and trailed up an alley to the rear of 729 Green street. There they entered a gate and discovered a spot where earth had been newly dug. Detective Ed Gibson called for a shovel, but the small excavation did not reveal any hidden members of the body. Here, apparently, the dogs lost the trail.

Society Attends Grand Opera, Whose Advance Sale Was $85,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 6.—The Conreid Opera Company, from the Metropolitan Opera-House, New York, opened its season of 12 performances in this city tonight at the Grand Opera-House. "Rigoletto" was presented to a fashionable audience which crowded every inch of the vast auditorium, all the seats having been sold several days ago. Society was out in force, and there ago. Society was out in force, and there was a splendid display of costumes and Madame Sembrich, always a favorite here, was given an ovation on her reappearance, and Caruso, the great tenor, who made his first appearance on this Coast, scored an instant success. Tonight's performance has demonstrated the artistle success of the season, which financially was already assured, the advance sale of seats amounting to over $55,000, almost, if not quite, equalling the total receipts of scats amounting to over $85,000, almost, if not quite, equalling the total receipts of the recently concluded appearances of the company in Chicago.

A notable feature of the advance sale was the large number of orders received from adjacent cities and towns. In response to the great desire manifested to bear "Parsifal," that masterpiece of Wagner, never before produced here, will be given three times. From here the company will return East by way of Los Angeles and other Southern cities.

ABERDEEN, Wash, April 6.—(Special.)—The Harrington-Thornton the arrical combination had a queer experience in Oakville, where they recently played an engagement. A woman who patronized the show had some trouble with an usher, and she vented her spite on the company. She was a regular boarder at the hotel where the company stopped, and made remarks detrimental to the organisation and especially in regard to the private reputation of the women who belonged to it. Her remarks caused retorts which incensed her, and she swore out a warrant for the arrest of the trio. They were found guilty and fined in all about $50, which they refused to pay. They were committed to the County Jall in Montesano, ten miles away, and then came the difficulty of paying their fare, which neither the Justice nor the citizens would put up, though an order on the County Commissioners was offered as security. Finally the husband of the woman who swore out the warrant provided the means for transportation, and the company was taken to Montesano, where they were released this morning on a note of habeas corpus granted by Judge Irwin of the Superior Court.
