

TEAMSTERS GO OUT

Struggle for the Closed Shop Opens in Chicago.

STRIKERS' RANKS GROWING

Drivers of Express Wagons Join Those of Montgomery, Ward & Co., and Mobs Pursue Non-union Teamsters.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Chicago is again in the throes of a struggle between capital and labor unions. All on former occasions, the unions have resorted to the use of union teamsters to bring them victory in the struggle, which tonight promises to spread to many branches of the teaming industry of Chicago.

The present struggle had its beginning in a strike several months ago of a few hundred garmentworkers employed by the mail order house of Montgomery, Ward & Co. The closed shop is the issue, and in order to prevent the strikers from forming a union a strike of the 20 drivers and teamsters employed by the concern was called today.

An idea always been the case in the past when the teamsters were called on to assist by a sympathetic strike, the downtown streets of Chicago today were scenes of disorders which followed fast on each other, when an attempt was made to deliver goods with omnibus drivers. Many teamsters, garmentworkers and their friends filled the streets and many clashes with the police occurred. In several instances it was necessary for the police to arrest a number of the agitators before the blockades could be lifted.

Employers Will Seek Injunction.

A motion to ask the United States District Court to restrain the strikers was reached tonight by the employers. The petition will be filed by the General Managers' Railway Express Association and it will request an injunction against any driver who refused to deliver freight to that firm, was put to the test when A. D. Meyer, a driver for Wells, Fargo & Co., was about to turn and drive away at the command of the union men in the street. Superintendent Reed, of the Express Association, halted the wagon and ordered Meyer to make the delivery.

Meyer said he was afraid of the pickets. He was immediately discharged. Mr. Reed himself unloaded the wagon. Business Agent J. B. Barry, of the Express Drivers' Union, has declared that he will order a strike of all express drivers. It is reported that the Association of General Agents and Express Companies entering Chicago is holding nonunion men in readiness for such an emergency.

Lively Chase After a Team.

Pickets and strike sympathizers gave S. H. Phillips, manager for L. Feder, manufacturer of women's wrappers, a lively chase through the streets, following a delivery by him of goods to the strike-bound driver. Phillips refused to make the delivery. When the wagon left the police-protected zone about the building it was pursued by hundreds of shouting strikers. Whipping up his team, Phillips distanced his pursuers.

John Olson, a licensed expressman, was less fortunate. After a chase manager, Olson, after delivering four boxes of goods, was set upon by the pickets, who climbed to the seat and pulled Olson to the ground and handed him rough to express the belief that a Republican will be elected.

The fact has been brought out that Colorado politics are intensely corrupt. The corruption is not confined to the Republican party; it flourishes in both parties, but, as in all states where politics are extremely corrupt, there is a constant shifting of alliances first one and then the other party to power. Men in power claim to know that Colorado will be as safely Democratic next year as any state in the South.

In Missouri a power struggle will probably exist next year. The boogie agitation, which helped the Republicans in 1904, will have died out; the convicted presidential electors will be such a powerful force, and the voters will have forgotten the frauds. Then there will be the lack of the administration influence, which was one of the power factors in the election in Missouri last fall was admitted to have been a fraud; it resulted from a combination of unusual circumstances which will not be such a combination next fall, and Missouri will cordially drift back to her old moorings.

Moreover, the Republicans of Missouri, during the late senatorial contest, showed a lack of organization, a lack of true party spirit and a lack of good management. Under these circumstances they cannot hope to carry the state in a Congressional election. The Republicans of Missouri are in much the same condition as the Republicans of Delaware; Missouri seems to have its Adickes, though Kerns is more liberal, at the last moment, than the gas magnate has proven. Missouri Republicans must present a solid front if they hope to win; and it has been demonstrated that they cannot do this. Therefore, it is probable Missouri will fall back to its old place.

Thrown From Buggy and Dragged. Walter Steapy, a young man who lives at Vancouver avenue, was very seriously injured last night about 10 o'clock in a runaway. He was dragged by the horse fully five blocks and thrown into a deep excavation, the animal falling on top of him. He was taken to his home, where he is in a critical condition. Miss Grace Thomas was out driving with Steapy at the time of the accident. She presented to the buggy and severely injured. They were driving on Williams street when the horse ran into a pile of sand in the road which could not be seen in the dark. The buggy tipped over, throwing Miss Thomas in the street. Steapy became entangled in the lines and the broken buggy was dragged down the street by the maddened brute. Those who witnessed the accident say it was a marvel that he was not killed outright. The horse was not injured.

DOUBTFUL STATES IN WEST

Colorado and Missouri Not Secure in Republican Column.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, April 7.—Two Western States carried by Roosevelt in the last election are almost sure to turn up in the Democratic column next year—Colorado and Missouri. The latter is normally a Democratic state, and would not have gone Republican this year had it not been for the strong personality of the Republican candidate. But Colorado, the continuous on the shift, and the pendulum is now swinging in the direction of the Democrat.

Prior to the silver agitation, in 1896, Colorado was a good Republican state. That year the silver cause swept over Colorado, like most every other Western state, and the Republicans were sniped in the election that year. Gradually the silver sentiment has been smothered, and is now almost dead, though there are a few scattering Coloradans who still cling to Bryan's ideas. When Colorado brought up again in the Republican column at the Congressional election three years ago, and became even more strongly Republican in 1904, there was hope that the Democratic strength had been broken.

But new issues have arisen, new difficulties have come to the front, which threaten to wrest the party from the Republicans and restore the Democrats to power. The issue fought over the Governorship in Colorado; the disgraceful manner in which the gubernatorial election was conducted; the manifest fraud in both parties, and the corruption of many Republican state officials, has aroused public sentiment to such an extent that the leading Republicans of the state now concede that the state will be lost to them at the next election.

Another thing which will help the Democrats is the manner in which the Peabody Republican administration handled the labor troubles. While the principle involved is generally upheld, Peabody's methods are roundly condemned in Colorado. The Republicans supported Peabody to the late election, re-elected him by a very doubtful method, and were then compelled to drop him. The whole proceeding left a nasty odor, and the state will stand for it. That is why Colorado leaders expect, next year, to see three Democratic Congressmen elected to succeed the three sitting Republicans, and the three members themselves are fearful of this result. Thus Colorado elects her Governor for only two years. A successor to Governor McDonald must be chosen next year, and no farmed Republican from Colorado so bold as to express the belief that a Republican will be elected.

The fact has been brought out that Colorado politics are intensely corrupt. The corruption is not confined to the Republican party; it flourishes in both parties, but, as in all states where politics are extremely corrupt, there is a constant shifting of alliances first one and then the other party to power. Men in power claim to know that Colorado will be as safely Democratic next year as any state in the South.

In Missouri a power struggle will probably exist next year. The boogie agitation, which helped the Republicans in 1904, will have died out; the convicted presidential electors will be such a powerful force, and the voters will have forgotten the frauds. Then there will be the lack of the administration influence, which was one of the power factors in the election in Missouri last fall was admitted to have been a fraud; it resulted from a combination of unusual circumstances which will not be such a combination next fall, and Missouri will cordially drift back to her old moorings.

DIFFERENT TIDE LEVELS INTERFERE WITH LOCKLESS CANAL PROJECT

The many articles that have appeared in the newspapers and magazines about the Panama Canal and the various plans for its construction have interested people throughout the country. The proposition made it a sea-level canal has been suggested, and while such a plan would naturally seem the most feasible, there are difficulties in the way. The Atlantic and Pacific Oceans are "level at mean tide," but they are not level for practical purposes of a lockless canal, since when the tide is low the Pacific side is more than ten feet lower than the Caribbean side. The same situation exists at high tide. Upon the Pacific side the waters are 12 feet higher than upon the Atlantic at high tide, and it is only at mean tide that both oceans are level.

DUTY AS WORLD-POWER.

Loomis Says We Must Live Up to Our Ideals.

PHILADELPHIA, April 7.—Many men prominent in the field of social and political economy are attending the ninth annual meeting of the American Association of Political and Social Science, which began today. The general theme under discussion is "The United States as a World Power." The various aspects of this main question were taken up today and will be further discussed tomorrow.

The annual address was made tonight by Seth L. Loomis, of the University of Pennsylvania, who took for his subject "The Position of the United States Among the Nations." The President's address, by Professor Leo S. Rowe, of the University of Pennsylvania, was also delivered tonight.

At the afternoon session the subject under discussion was "The Position of the United States on the American Continent." Those who spoke on this phase of the general theme under discussion were Francis B. Loomis, First Assistant Secretary of State; Julio Larrazaga, Porto Rican Commissioner; and Professor E. R. Johnson, of the University of Pennsylvania; Professor Laddie, Miller Kenney, Bryn Mawr College, and Talcott Williams and Henry J. Hancock, of Philadelphia. Mr. Loomis said:

There are certain conditions which must be fulfilled if we are to occupy a position worth having in this world. This country has always stood before the world as a nation of high ideals and lofty aims which inspired the founders of this Republic. We must live a sound National life if we expect to exercise, in the family of nations, a real and beneficent influence. The position of the United States in the New World is ever in the process of determination. The question presents itself to us from time to time in the form of practical ways that cannot be avoided. So it will be found, I fancy, that the degree of our influence, the importance and power, if you please, of our position, will be determined by the manner in which we deal with a kindly regard for the interests of humanity, and if it be felt and understood that we are not wanton aggressors; that we have no irresistible craving for territorial aggrandizement; that we ask only for our share of the trade of the world, we cannot fail to become a solid factor or element in the international position of the hemisphere which shall continually make for universal prosperity and long years of productive and happy peace.

He was presented one night at the club's late supper, a weekly feast, and, having heard that there was a vacancy in the roll, applied for membership. Now, the only rules of "Sub Rosa" men are: "Think much. Write little. Be as silent as you can." The presiding officer, with this last rule in mind, answered the applicant by placing before him a tumbler filled so full of water

Anton Bauer Flings It Away When Boy Is Lost.

SUICIDE FOLLOWS DIVORCE

After Vain Efforts at Reconciliation, Former Oregon Man Loses Wife and Son and Then Blows Out His Brains.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 7.—(Special.)—Broken-hearted over the separation from his wife and son by a decree of divorce, Anton Bauer, who came here a year ago from Oregon, shot himself today in the brain.

Bauer had been married five years. His domestic troubles began in Oregon, where his child was born. Since coming to Lincoln he has lived apart from his wife and child, though he has frequently visited them and sought to effect a reconciliation. The divorce decree granted to Mrs. Bauer yesterday gave her the custody of the little boy. This is what broke the father's heart. He loved the child and weaned him.

Before the divorce proceedings were started the couple agreed that Mrs. Bauer was to take $500 and that Bauer was to pay the costs of the suit. Yesterday he paid over the money, sold his farm and put $1000 in trust for the boy. He also carried $2000 life insurance, payable to his son.

RACE FOR CABLE.

Two Correspondents Make Dash for End of Wire.

Metropolitan. All that afternoon, as they crossed the brownest, most level and ancient country on earth, the two correspondents toiled. The Great Wall cast a long shadow when they passed through its only break, and the early twilight was soft and warm. Both men arose, Tien-shankwan was less than a mile ahead from the wall. They were in a free land. War and censorship lay behind.

They reached the platform by different doors. Crapo saw Borden and ran for him. A China boy, holding a prickered black stallion, stood beside the C. P. man.

"They're expecting you at the cable office," said Borden.

"Thanks," Crapo yelled, spurring across the sandy station-yard to the road. There was a beating of hoofs behind. Crapo turned and saw Bingley straining forward in his saddle, furiously howling his mount.

"The best horse wins, Bingley," Crapo shouted, digging deep. His stallion answered; verily he was a black streak whirling cableward. Crapo praised his stars and his gods that he knew Tien-shankwan. He wondered if Bingley knew the way as well—Bingley, back in the shadows, yelling and howling until the last fraction of an instant before pulling up to the jerked, leaped clear of his mount, and ran to the steps of the cable office. Just before the door slammed behind him he heard a third outside, but did not turn.

"I'm Crapo, Borden arranged for me," he said, thrusting his copy, his credentials and his cable permit into the hand of the man behind the desk.

"All right, we're ready for you," the latter answered.

The outer door opened. Bingley entered, his clothing caked with dust, his hands bleeding, his face as gray as ash.

"Did you fail?" Crapo asked quickly. "The horsekiller" did not answer, but stooped himself toward a chair. Crapo's nerve broke that moment. He ran to the other's aid.

"Bingley, old fellow," he said, "I'll pull out in a couple of hours, and give you a whack at the wire. There's room for two at the top."

"Thanks, very much," said Bingley, dropping his head back and snuffing his eyes. "Very kind of you, I'm sure. But the best horse won and I will accept no favors."

VITAL WEAKNESS. Above all other things, we strive to save the thousands of young and middle-aged men who are plunging toward the grave, tortured by the woes of nervous debility. We have evolved a special treatment for Nervous Debility and special weakness that is uniformly successful in cases where success was before and by other doctors deemed impossible. It does not stimulate temporarily but restores permanently. It always irritates of the delicate tissues surrounding the lax and unduly expanded glands, contracting them to their normal condition, and prevents lost vitality. It tones up and strengthens the blood vessels that carry nourishment. The patient realizes a great benefit has been effected from his life.

We want all MEN WHO ARE SUFFERING from any disease or special weakness to feel that they can come to our office freely for examination and explanation of their condition. FREE OF CHARGE, without being bound by any obligation whatever to take treatment unless they so desire. Write.
