

SHE RESTS IN JAIL

Nan Patterson Too Exhausted to Be Removed.

RELEASE ON BAIL ASSURED

Almost Powerless to Move, Girl Is Dragged From Bed to Jail

NEW YORK, May 4.—No positive steps were taken today toward having Nan Patterson released on bail, it being agreed by her counsel and her father that, even though bail were possible at once, it would be better for the girl to remain quietly in the Tombs for a rest after the ordeal she underwent last night.

During the day alarming reports were circulated as to Miss Patterson's condition, but it was stated at the Tombs tonight that her condition is practically normal. She shows no effects of her trial, but is far from a real breakdown. She spent a large part of the day sleeping in her cell, being thoroughly exhausted from her long vigil and the nervous strain last night.

Miss Patterson's lawyers tomorrow will endeavor to reach an agreement with the District Attorney's office as to the amount of bail their client shall be required to give. They hope the sum will be nominal, but say they are ready to furnish a bondsman for any amount within reason.

There is much speculation as to what course the District Attorney will pursue with reference to the trial of J. Morgan Smith and his wife on the charge of conspiracy, and what effect the testimony adduced at their hearing might have upon a possible fourth trial of Miss Patterson.

Prisoner Collapses in Court.

Dramatic in the extreme were the closing scenes. When the foreman had finally ascertained that there was no possibility of reaching an agreement, the prisoner was in a dead faint. At 2:27 o'clock A. M. the Recorder declared the jury discharged, and ordered Miss Patterson returned to the Tombs prison.

In the streets below thousands of persons, held back by mounted police, cheered the news, but were somewhat disappointed. They evidently favored the young woman and had expected her acquittal.

Various rumors gained currency as to how the jury stood. Information received by the Associated Press is that the jury stood seven to five in favor of acquittal.

When Recorder Goff was summoned to court, soon after 1 o'clock, the room was filled with spectators, two of whom were women. Only those possessing permits were allowed to enter, but in the streets surrounding the Tombs and the courthouse were thousands awaiting the outcome.

With their eyes riveted on the bridge leading from the prison they watched the possible glimpses of the prisoner, who, they hoped, might pause at a window momentarily should she be called to court. Mounted police kept the people in order and maintained passageway for the stretcher.

Dragged From Bed to Court.

When the Recorder reached his desk and ordered the prisoner brought from her cell, she did not appear. Being informed that the prisoner was ill, Mr. Goff declared that the court could not proceed; that she must be present.

After a lapse of ten minutes, she appeared, leaning heavily on the arm of a Deputy Sheriff. She showed more strength than even her lawyers had hoped. In the crossing of the "Bridge of Sighs" she was surrounded by a throng of the watchers below, and seemingly every voice was attuned in her favor.

Upon reaching the dock she grasped the railing for support, and gazed anxiously at the jury. When they announced their failure to agree and were sent back for further consultation, she almost collapsed, and had to be carried from the room.

At 2:15 o'clock the same scenes were enacted. Miss Patterson was then in a state bordering on collapse. She trembled like a leaf when the jury filed in the morning and when the foreman finally made a personal poll of the jury and announced that its members were fixed in their opinions and the formality of the discharge had been completed she was in a dead faint.

Nervous Wreck, Says Doctor.

After one of his visits to his daughter, Mr. Patterson said: "I did not try to talk to her. She seemed to be asleep, as if she needed rest. I had not the heart to talk to her after what she went through last night. She is in the hands of her sister, and I am satisfied with that."

"Dr. F. A. McGuire, the prison physician, today said: "She is a nervous wreck. She is unable to retain food. She is physically so weak that she cannot carry a cup of beef tea to her lips. I will take her on or three days for her to recover her normal strength. Her sister, Julia, is consulting her, and her conversation at present is the best medicine."

Dr. McGuire said Miss Patterson said to him today: "I feel as if somebody had hit me all over my body with a club. I feel bruised and sore all over."

Although in a state bordering on complete collapse when she went to her cell early today, after the jury had been discharged, Miss Patterson soon was quieted, and slept peacefully throughout the night. When a deputy warden, making his rounds at 4 o'clock this morning, reached the cell of Miss Patterson and her sister, Nan was still sleeping heavily. At the side of the couch knelt her sister, Mrs. Smith, who was also asleep, with one arm thrown on the pillow on which Miss Patterson's head lay. The deputy warden carried with him 11 letters addressed to Miss Patterson. He left them at the cell door, and did not disturb either of the women.

Julia Goldstone, one of the jurors, collapsed at his home today from nervous prostration. The strain of the long night session of the jury completely exhausted him.

Nan Patterson's Sister Criticizes Action of Her Lawyers.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—J. R. Patterson, father of Nan Patterson, today telegraphed his family concerning the result of the jury's deliberations in the Patterson case, adding an expression of belief that the former showed shortly will be at liberty to return home.

"I feel that the defense in Nanmie's case did wrong in not presenting any evidence in this trial. Knowing as we do that she is innocent, it seems to me that the better way would have been to put forward all the evidence possible."

"Do you expect a letter from Miss Patterson very soon?" was asked. "Yes, just as soon as Nanmie is able to write me I think she will. She has been writing at the times. It is terrible to think that she could not have been acquitted," continued Mrs. Taylor, "when we know the truth. We comfort mamma by telling her that Nanmie will be back soon anyhow, and, after all, that is what we want."

Mrs. Taylor said she thought her sister had borne up wonderfully well. "I don't see how she ever stood it as she has," she remarked. "It has been terrible—more of a persecution than a prosecution."

BRANDEGEE IS THE CHOICE

Will Succeed O. H. Platt as Connecticut Senator.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 4.—The caucus of Republican members of the Connecticut Legislature today named a successor to the late Senator O. H. Platt, chose Representative F. B. Brandegee, of New London, on the 5th ballot.

Frank Bonworth Brandegee was born in New London, Conn., July 5, 1864. He graduated from Yale College in the class of 1885, was admitted to the bar of New London County in 1888, and has ever since practiced in New London. In 1888 he was a Representative from New London in the General Assembly of Connecticut, and was chairman of the committee on cities and boroughs. In 1893 he was elected Corporation Counsel of the City of New London and held the office continuously, with the exception of two years when his party was not in power, until he resigned upon his entrance into Congress. He was a delegate to the Republican National Convention at Minneapolis in 1892. He is a member of the Republican State Central Committee. In 1899 he was the Speaker of the Connecticut House of Representatives. He was elected to the 55th Congress to fill a vacancy created by the death of a member of the same party.

Various rumors gained currency as to how the jury stood. Information received by the Associated Press is that the jury stood seven to five in favor of acquittal.

WATER FOR YAKIMA

Government Proposes Irrigation Project.

LARGE AREA IS WITHDRAWN

Reclamation Engineers Favor the Scheme, Provided State Abandons Carey Act Enterprise Covering Much of Tract.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, May 4.—The Secretary of the Interior today withdrew from entry about 150,000 acres of land in Kittitas County, Washington, lying along the Yakima River, with a view to its ultimate irrigation, provided the Government undertakes the construction of a project in that region. This withdrawal, considered with the report made by the Board of Consulting Engineers on Washington projects, strongly indicates that if the Government is to irrigate in Washington in the near future, it must be in the Yakima Valley.

It is said by officials of the reclamation service that there are better prospects of irrigation along the Yakima River than anywhere else in the state, since it has been found that the Palouse project is likely to be extremely costly.

State Must Drop Carey Scheme. But before the Government will undertake irrigation in the Yakima Valley, even of the land today withdrawn, it must have assurance that the state will not proceed with the selection of land which it has made under the Carey act. A question is now pending before the Secretary of the Interior, involving several hundred thousand acres in the Yakima Valley which the state selected with a view to having it irrigated by the Washington Irrigation Company. There is also a contest pending to defeat this selection.

If the selection is approved, and action is looked for almost any day, the reclamation service will abandon the idea of building an irrigation project in the Yakima Valley, but if the Government has a clear field, it can utilize to advantage Lakes Cle Elum, Keechelus and Kachess, which form natural reservoirs just above the lands that were today withdrawn from entry. But in case the state selection is approved, the lands withdrawn in the interest of the Government project will probably be restored to entry.

A. J. Fanno, candidate for the Republican nomination for Councilman from the Fifth Ward, is a native son of Oregon, born and raised in Washington County, where he has farmed successfully for the past 30 years. He has been a resident of the City of Portland for eight years last past, and is a large property-owner and taxpayer in both Multnomah and Washington Counties. He is universally recognized as a careful, conservative business man, and has both the time and inclination to devote to the duties of the office, that attention it requires.

gamblers that they would not be permitted to continue their business there. Heretofore no attempt has been made to enforce the law in that county, and it was generally supposed none would be made. It appears the Sheriff made up his mind it was his duty to suppress the vice, and he proceeded to act on the theory. "All the gamblers closed down at once, and for the first time in the history of those places there is no game running in either town."
