SCEPTIC TANKS AT MOUNT TABOR-Many of the residents of Mount Tabor have resorted to sceptic tanks, on the recommendation of Dr. Woods-Hutchinson, as a means for disposing of sewerage from houses. The first one installed was that of the Portland Sanitarium, several months ago, and it proved a great suc-cess. It is six feet wide, six feet deep and twelve feet long and readily dis-poses of the sewerage from the sanitar-ium, where there are more than 100 per-sons all the time. Dr. O. F. Botkins in-stalled a sceptic tank at his residence on Sherlock avenue and others at Mount Tabor have adopted this method of dis-posing of sewerage. In the absence of sewer pipe this method is recommended as the only effective method. The cost is comparatively small and the sceptic tank is easily built.

A few more years and there will be but few living specimens of rare wild animals to be seen anywhere in cap-tivity. Every year witnesses their de-cline towards extinction. Their scarcity is already a matter of grave con-cern to natural historians. Man, in his progress, is driving them from their natural elements in forests and jungles and on pampas, steppes and plains. It is only in such institutions as the me-their menageries are constantly being augmented by the addition of new spec-imens of animals that are captured in the jungles and fastnesses of all the world and sent to them by their para-mount agents abroad. Some seasons ago, realizing that wild animals would become more and more valuable, and appreciating the worth of a goodly collection, they gave their foreign agents the strictest instructions to purchase on sight every rare wild beast obtain-able. That the agents carried out their orders implicitly is best shown by the large number of animals sent over, in fact the number grew to such proportions that the young circus owners were compelled to order larger tents and join the two menageries into one huge double affair that will take the auditor more than an hour in seeing,

INTERMENT OF GUGLIELMO

To the strains of "Nearer My God, to Thee," the body of Frank Guglielmo, hanged at Salem Friday for the murder of his sweetheart, was yesterday afterof his awcenteart, was yesternay after-moon consigned to its last resting-place in Mount Calvary Cemetery. Headed by De Caprio's Italian band of II pleces, and fol-lowed by eight carriages containing 28 persons, including clergyman, mourners, pallbearers and sympathizing friends, the funeral cortege wended its way from the undertaking establishment on Seventh and undertaking establishment on Seventh and Ankeny streets to Sixth, up Sixth to Mor-Ankeny streets to Sixth, up Sixth to Mor-rison, thence to Fourth, and from there to St. Michael's Church, at Fourth and Mill, where Rev. Father Alexander Ces-telli preached a sermon first in Italian and then in English over the remains of the dead murderer. After the obsequise in the church, the procession proceeded to the cemetery, where the interment took the cemetery, where the interment took place in the family vault. Even here, though, the dead was not destined to follow the final priestly injunction, "requiescat in pace," for commercial greed had interposed objections to removing the cement and other obstructions necessary to carry out the dead man's wishes to be laid by the side of his narents and there readlesting the structions necessary to carry out the dead man's wishes to be laid by the side of his parents, and then readjusting the masonry at the agreed price of $10, an advantage was sought to be taken of the situation by charging $30, which Gugthe situation by charging $30, which Gug-lielmo's friends refused to pay. A com-promise was finally effected by the grave-digger removing enough of the masonry to permit the interment, but the vault is still uncovered, and liable to remain so until the labor troubles are ended. There was no disturbance of any sort, affecting the peaceable passage of the train through the principal streets and if any of the friends or relatives of the murdered girl were witnesses to the final chapter of the tragedy that stirred the Italian colony to its depths less than a year ago, they did not make their presyear ago, they did not make their pres-ence known by any outward demonstra-tion. Hundreds lined the sidewalks as the sion passed along, evidently attracted by idle curiomity, as the only evi-dence of sympathy occurred at the un-dertaker's, at the church when the priest and finished his exhortation, and at the grave, when the plain rosewood canket was lowered out of sight, and nearly all this sorrow came from those who were attached to the dead by ties of blood.

Even the elements seemed to frown upon the act of making the principal streets of a civilized city the highway for melodious paens to a murderer, and the artillery of Heaven saluted the cortege with sullen grumble and roar as it rounded into Morrison street from Sixth, and, as if inspired by instincts of pity that passions of love and law should wreak such have in human hearts; that love should have its criminal impulse and law its vengeance—the rain fell from the skies like tears, and the humbler class of followers in the funeral train wondered in their superstitious way whether it had anything to do with the mysteries of the breafter.

Rev. Father Castelli was vehement at times in drawing a moral from the fate of the young man who had in life been one of his parishioners, and to whom he had last Wednesday administered the religious rites of the Catholic Church. He referred in feelings of deep grief that he should come to such an untimely end, and drew the conclusoin that the lack of mother's love and a father's encourage-ment and sympathy had a great deal to do with the situation.

"He took a life, and he gave a life,"

A large two-story building is being are not the only race that kills in the heat of passion. Only the other night one American shot down another in a saloon for no more reason than prompted this young man to shoot down the girl he loved." In concluding his sermon the father grew even more earnest, and recommended those present to take the lesson to heart. "Keep your money in your pocket, or buy something with it that will do you some good," he said, "instead of buying knives and revolvers to get you into trouble. Obey the laws, commit no bed, three beds being placed in each into trouble. Obey the laws, commit no wrong, and you need not be afraid of any

THROWN FROM HIS BUGGY P. J. Mann Is Seriously Injured

P. J. Mann, one of the pioneers of Oregon, narrowly escaped instant death yearterday afternoon by being thrown out of a buggy when out driving with two of his fastest horses. He had a shoulder wrenched and was severely bruised. The accident took place near Fourth and Jefferson streets.

Mr. Mann was thrown heavily to the ground and rendered unconscious. The city ambulance was summoned and he was taken to his home. Third and College streets, where the physicians were hastily called. He regained consciousness after being taken to his residence. The physicians say that it may be that he was injured internally, but that they cannot tell yet. He was in considerable pain, but it was mostly confined to his shoulder. Although Mr. Mann is 72 years of age, it is not thought that the injuries he sustained will result seriously.
