

LET PEOPLE ADVISE

Plan of Bouligan for Russian National Assembly.

CZAR WILL REMAIN DESPOT

Commission's Report Allows Representatives of Zemstvos to Form National Body With Power to Advise and Debate.

RUMORED MASSACRE OF JEWS. ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—Sensational rumors are current here that there has been a three-days' massacre of Jews at Vichnia, capital of the Province of Volhynia, in Southwest Russia. The rumor has not been confirmed.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 9.—(9:30 A.M.)—A report defining the form and character of the new branch of the government to be created in accordance with the imperial rescript of March 2 is current in official circles here, according to which the findings of the Bouligan commission have taken the form of a recommendation for the creation of a Zemsky Soviet, or council of Zemstvos, elected indirectly through the Zemstvos to serve as a connecting link between the Emperor and the people.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—The Emperor Nicholas is said to have accepted the report of the commission and the date of its proclamation has been tentatively fixed for May 13. The main features of the reported scheme are an organization comprising from 200 to 300 members, elected by the Zemstvos, the system being extended to all parts of the empire. The autocratic power of the Emperor will remain undiminished, the assembly's privileges being advisory, with the right of interpellating the ministers and discussing the budget when formulated. The ministers continue to be responsible only to the Emperor, whose will will remain the supreme law. Elections will be held during the summer in order that the first session of the new assembly may open on November 15.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—The main features of the reported scheme are an organization comprising from 200 to 300 members, elected by the Zemstvos, the system being extended to all parts of the empire. The autocratic power of the Emperor will remain undiminished, the assembly's privileges being advisory, with the right of interpellating the ministers and discussing the budget when formulated. The ministers continue to be responsible only to the Emperor, whose will will remain the supreme law. Elections will be held during the summer in order that the first session of the new assembly may open on November 15.

BATTLE WITH PEASANT MOB

Troops Shoot Down Twenty to Prevent Rescue of Prisoners.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—Advises have been received from Shorapan, in the Ishmed district, telling of an attack by soldiers on a crowd of riotous peasants, in which more than 20 of the latter were killed or wounded. It is alleged that the peasants attacked the soldiers in an endeavor to rescue some prisoners who had been placed under arrest on a charge of conspiracy. The troops fired into the mob, which held its ground for a time, but finally gave away. Later a crowd, composed principally of relatives of the dead and wounded, sacked the property of the Prince Abanek and then burned the buildings. General disorders are reported from the provinces of Poltava and Lazardoff. It is reported that the authorities are only succeeding in keeping the peasants within bounds by the free use of bayonets and bullets, and that many have been killed or wounded. The authorities are suppressing the reports from these districts and details are unobtainable.

HUNTING DOWN THE REBELS

Warsaw Police Seize Bombs and Guns and Cavalry Patrol Streets.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—(1:30 A.M.)—Dispatches received here indicate that the police there have conducted a vigorous campaign to put a stop to bombthrowing and shooting, capturing numbers of bombs and revolvers in houses occupied by various agitators. Some idea of the extent of the panic prevailing in Poland before May 1 is contained in a letter to the Associated Press in which it is stated that the number of persons killed in Warsaw to persons desiring to go abroad the preceding two months was 27,000. The Associated Press informant says that the continuous firing with practically no cessation of the cavalry and that trouble on a large scale apparently is out of the question.

SWEAR NOT TO FIGHT REBELS

New Scheme to Prevent Russian Soldiers From Suppressing Revolt.

MOSCOW, May 8.—A propaganda sting in disguise the Government of the most effective weapon for fighting dissent is being preached by the Moscow committee of the Social Revolutionists, who are circulating among the peasants thousands of copies of proclamations calling upon them to exact oaths from their sons on entering the army never to raise their hands against peasants or workmen. The proclamation attacks the war and attributes Russian defeats to violations by Grand Dukes and Generals and urges the peasants to rise and take their rights.

SHIPOFF RULES CONGRESS.

Moderate Liberal Sustained by Majority of Zemstvos.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—The extreme strength developed by M. Shipoff, the President of the Moscow Zemstvo at the Moscow Zemstvo Congress, is the cause of great satisfaction to the Moderate Liberals. He made a strong speech against the radical constitution programme, and, although 24 orators opposed him vigorously, when the question was put to a test he captured 80 out of the 122 delegates in the opposition camp.

BLOODY CONFLICT IN CAUCASUS

Police Kill and Wound Twenty in Attacking Mob.

TIFLIS, May 8.—Police who were attempting to arrest two men who had tried to murder a nobleman in a village near here were attacked by a mob of would-be rescuers. In the conflict which ensued 20 of the mob were killed or wounded.

Penalty for Defending Gorky.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—M. Novitski, editor of the Novosti, was re-arrested today and charged with the publication of statements subversive of the constituted form of government. He was released on $500 bail. The extreme penalty for Novitski's offense is exile to Siberia for three years. The basis of the charge is the publication of a statement of Maxim Gorky's lawyer in defense of his client. The case is attracting particular attention, the Novosti being the leading Jewish organ in Russia.

Rebels Riot in Music Hall.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—(6 P. M.)—There was a serious disturbance today at the opening of a music hall and Summer garden in the Molska quarter. During the performance a man mounted a table and began scattering proclamations, causing a scene of great confusion, during which people began to sing revolutionary songs, while others tried to prevent them from so doing. A free fight was almost in progress when the police were summoned, drove the audience out of the place and closed the garden.

Bombs Found in Workman's House.

LODZ, May 8.—The police today discovered two bombs in the house of a workman, on Laxno street. The workman, his wife and child and four men armed with revolvers were found on the premises and arrested. The bombs were unusually large and fully charged with explosives of great force.

Peasants Burn and Sack Estates.

TYRASPOL, Russia, May 8.—A general revolutionary movement has occurred among the peasants of the Province of Bessarabia. They have attacked and burned several estates. The valuable estate of Prince Abanek is among those destroyed.

Printers Get Their Holiday.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—The printers, who struck Sunday, April 23, have won a victory in their demand for observance of Sundays and holidays by abstention from work, only the Novoe Vremya appearing this morning.

Peasants Burn Prince's Property.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 8.—The peasants have burned the property of Prince Lazardoff, at Kherson. A strong force of dragoons has been dispatched to Kherson.

DIG CANAL IN FOUR YEARS

BUNAU VARILLA TELLS PLAN OFFERED ROOSEVELT.

Lock Canal Can Be Built and Used While It Is Being Changed to Sea-Level Canal.

PARIS, May 8.—The Academy of Science today heard a communication from M. Bunau Varilla, former Panamanian minister to the United States, upon the solution of the Panama canal problem by the new method of combining a lock canal for the immediate demands of commerce and a sea-level waterway for the ultimate requirements.

THE "HE SAID" GIRLS.

Occasionally They Develop Into Fine Women, but Not Often.

Emporia (Kan.) Gazette. Did you ever notice a group of little girls between the ages of 14 and 15 sitting away in a corner? The next time you see such a group, listen and hear if about every tenth word is about what "he said." If it is, you have found some more of the "he said" girls, and they are not the little girls in the school. The "he said" girls are likely to loiter down town after school to late to help their mothers with the afternoon work. They are likely to wear better clothes than their fathers can afford, so that the neighbors wonder what their mothers can be thinking about. The "he said" girls also too often think more of the boys than of their books, and frequently fail to get through school. They are in for a good time, and have nothing in their heads but hairpins and two-steps. Sometimes Nature takes a girl out of the "he said" family and makes a fine woman of her. She generally has a fine time going out to parties and is desired before her time, and either married and fades at 20 or hangs on after all the other girls are married off, and takes generation after generation of young boys to raise by hand, and becomes known as "grandma" in the crowd. There is nothing so sweet as a simpering, frank, open-hearted girl. But the boy-struck girl is an abomination. The whole matter rests with the girl's mother. She can either bring up one of the "he said" girls or she can have a daughter to be proud of.

An Honest Hat "Disgraced."

The following advertisement appears in the Dunedin (New Zealand) Evening News: TO A HAT THERE. A local news item was "exchanged" at a local news item. It is the late owner's dearest possession. It is the late owner's dearest possession. It is the late owner's dearest possession.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Best and Most Popular.

"Mothers buy it for croupy children, but they buy it for themselves, too. It is the best remedy for coughs and colds, whether in a child or an adult. It is the best remedy for coughs and colds, whether in a child or an adult. It is the best remedy for coughs and colds, whether in a child or an adult."

JOS. H. H. H. H.

(Continued from First Page.)

car question, which as regards certain industries offers an even greater menace than is offered by the revenue question. I do not think that the law will be dealt with by many subjects, but I do feel that with the revenue question I have no objection to one or two others it should deal effectively. There will be the argument made on the other side that the power of taxation is being used to give the government a means of revenue that each power is liable to abuse. It is the power of taxation that is being used to give the government a means of revenue that each power is liable to abuse. It is the power of taxation that is being used to give the government a means of revenue that each power is liable to abuse.

Patterson Extends President.

He was followed by Governor Jesse McDonald, who spoke on "The State," and Mayor Robert W. Spear, who responded to "The City." Senator Thomas M. Patterson then spoke to the point, "The President." In opening he said: "The few of us who voted for another candidate at the last election, do not regret it. I admit that probably the great majority were wiser than the small minority in selecting the man they considered to be the best man for the job. He then referred in terms of the highest approval to the announcement of President Roosevelt on the night of his election that he would not be a candidate for re-election, and said: "With the announcement of his policy and the promise of his administration, those conservatives who had professed to fear for the future of the country by reason of the aggressive methods the President at times adopted and the popular acclaim with which he was greeted, have become a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to his country. Then he stood forward as he was and became to all what he had been to the country, a plain citizen on foot, the crown of a Caesar vanishes as an airy nothing and the scepter of Napoleon is a mere shadow. A copy of the Constitution as the sign and measure of the President's rule over his country, our social and industrial system, the power and glory of the greatest office in the world, to which he has been elected, and which he has so nobly discharged, has been stripped himself of the serious impediment that has wrecked not a few administrations, but has wrecked the country itself, as he saw it to