CIRCUS IN TOWN TO THE DELIGHT OF YOUNG AND OLD

Shricking his rollicking roundelay, a conster marched through the town; he woke the echoes, disturbed the peace and shouted defiance at the po-lice; he frightened the horses, annoyed the dogs, and even the autos trembled But the youngsters rejoiced at the din he made and followed his way with glee, as youngsters have done since in Hamelin-town another piper of high renown created havee across the sea. So latter-day children are wont to be entranced by the singing call-i-o-pe.

Again the painted wagons rolled through the streets and everybody, young and old, who could gain a vaniage-point feasted their eyes on the tage-point, feasted their eyes on the classic spectacle of the circus parade. If calendar-makers could secure more definite and certain information, I've no doubt circus day would be numbered in red as are the Fourth of July and other National holidays. Such an in-novation would certainly add to the in-terest of the calendar's plots and in-crease their circulation, for surely and certainly the circus procession has an important place in the procession of the equinoxes.

When a man or a woman becomes old as to lose all interest in circus-day it is time for him to call in Doctor Oxler.

mes who were instrumental in getting Station A re-established will meet this afternoon at the new station at 2 o'clock to inspect the premises and make some public recognition of the services of both afternoon and night, and for the convenience of those who were de-tained by imperative engagements the whole thing will be repeated today.

There are bigger shows than Norris & Rowe's. Possibly some better, but they're pretty much all alike, and pretty much all good, ty much all good.

There is a set formula for modern circuses, and one which, departed from it would fail for want of putronage. They may vary somewhat in form and quantity, but in spirit they must follow the traditions. The public will not tolerate undue liberties with so timehonored an institution.

The Norris & Rowe enterprise is properly conducted and it offers all the estatic thrills and aesthetic delights we demand of a circus.

It begins in the good old way. A much be-uniformed band marches around the big ring and plays on its tubas and trombones a most inspiring air. Then the elephants come lumbering in the wake of the band and they hold each other's tails. After that it is the camels and dromedaries, humped and melancholy, and then-delight delights, shades of chivalry—the knights and princesses ride in graceful ranks, garbed in such glory as to outshine the pomp of power. Then come the clowns humble Foricks of the saw-dust, and then the pageant melts away, and in the smaller rings, upon plat and in the smaller rings, upon plat-forms and high aloft toward the bil-lowing tent-top there is a riot of dar-ing deeds, kalledoscopic flashes of brawn and cosmetic beauty.

There is also a carnival of rude and unlettered mirth, where the funny old clowns are getting in their work. Then everybody on the luxurious blue seats begin the eating of peanuts and the craning of necks in order that the eternal fitness of things may be preserved.

It is hard to follow all the things they say and the things they do in the create but the excitement of trying circus, but the excitement of trying has helped to make life worth living in all these many modern generations. From the shricking of the calliope to the spieling of the concert adver-tiser. Norris & Rowe's is a real show, just as good as any other, and if not so large, maybe better. If you are so large, maybe better. If you are young you must not miss a circus. To do that is to be almost guilty of criminal negligence, for there is nothing quite so five as the circus when one is young. If you are old, you should go for the sake of memories.

doubt of that, but it was confined exclusively to the Sicilians. This secret society was organized in Sicily about 60 years ago. At that time the wealth of the island was controlled by rich French-men, and it was divided up in immense tracts of land. The poor natives were tracts of land. The poor natives were obliged to hire out to these men and were given hardly enough wages to subsist on.

But as soon as the conditions im-proved, the Mafia dissolved and there is no such organization now.

Americans are represented in The Americans are represented in nearly all of the important industries in Italy, continued Mr. Ressi. "Why, they have even sent American whisky over there to the claret-loving Italians. But the natives will not drink the whisky; it is too strong for them. In late years, however, they drink considerable beer in the hot Summer months."
