The great question in police circles is as to who will be the Chief. It is generally believed among the policemen that a great mistake will be made if a man is named for the position who has no previous experience and who is sure to issue orders and do things that will previous experience and who is sure to issue orders and do tungs that will bring chaos and discontent.

Mrs. Ella Frazer, of Eugene, former vice-president, was elected to the presidency of the Oregon Assembly, and Mrs. Clementine Bullock, former grand warden, moved forward to the vice-presidency. There was a lively, skirmish over the grand warden, as the candidate elected to this office eventually reaches the president's chair. Mrs. Emms Galloway, of McMinnville, proved the popular choice. Mrs. Ora Cesper, of Dallas, will be the secretary, and Mrs. Ida M. Hardman, of Portland, is the

The board which Democrats desire to get at most is the Civil Service Commission, which, they say, has been guilty of partiality in examining and grading applicants for office. They say that some applicants who have made low grades have been marked up on account of political favoritism, above other more satisfactory persons. It is broadly hinted in Mayor-elect Lame's circle of advisers that he will "clean out" the commission first of all. The charter will allow him to appoint only one of the three new members and the Council will appoint the two others. But even so, Democrats aver that the commission would be more satisfactory than now. The threat has been uttered that the one member whom the Mayor shall appoint will delve into the records of the commission and learn who have been graded high through favoritism. bers and the Council will appoint the two others. But even so, Democrats aver that the commission would be more satisfactory than now. The threat has been uttered that the one member whom the Mayor shall appoint will delve into the records of the commission and learn who have been graded high through favoritism.

"Dr. Lane will carry out the spirit of the civil service rules faithfully," said one of his Democratic advisers yesterday. "But frauds will be ferreted out and those city employes whose gradings and those city employes whose gradings and those city employes whose gradings in the examinations were falsely made will be detected and will be discharged."

One of the positions which will undoubtedly go to a Democrat is that of Captain of Detectives, which pays 300 a month, but which has been vacant since the death of Sam Simmons. Among those mentioned for the place is Patrick Maher, who has had considerable experience on the force as a patrolman and as a de-tective. Others are J. T. Wilson, who sought the place when Simmons was ap-pointed; William Morgan, formerly a patrolman; John Cordano, now Deputy Sheriff, and Lou Hartman, now a member

And while it is most strenuously denied that there is any cleavage between the old-time factions, it would not be surprising if a sharp scramble should ensue between the elements that used to be on the warpath. It is so long since the Democrats had a chance to run the city, and they have been plunged into such depths of despair, that they began to wonder if the sun would ever be bright again.

Therefore, wonder need not be expressed at the demand of some Democratic patriots that Mayor Lane "clean out" as many Republicans as possible. They ask that the new Mayor dismiss the Park Board, the Water Board and the Health Board, in order that Democrats may be put in possession of those places for distribution of salaried offices which the boards control such as those of the City Physician.
