Public Asks Why the Meat Ordinance Passed Over Mayor's Veto.

WILL INCREASE THE COST

It Is Held by Some That It Is in the Interest of the Pacific States Packing Company.

What was the controlling influence that prompted the City Council, on Wednesday last, to pass the notorious meat inspec tion ordinance over the Mayor's veto? Was it because the Pacific States Packing Company is made the abattoir under its provisions, where animals may be taken for slaughter and be inspected, and that Councilman Zimmerman owns the nd upon which the plant of the Pacific States Packing Company is situated, or is it because the portion of the ordinance relating to the appointment of an nance relating to the appointment of an inspector and his assistant was drawn with such deep ingenuity by its author. Dr. Clarence Loveberry, of the United States Buréau of Animal Industry, that only certain of his friends or relatives (or possibly himself) could be legally appointed to the principal positions?

These are questions that were frequently asked yesterday in view of the well-known fact that the Mayor based his known fact that the Mayor based ins-reasons for vetoing the measure upon the overwhelming number of protests that were made against it by responsible local dealers in mest products, reliable com-mission men of the city, and farmers of the surrounding country, all of whom are more or less injuriously affected by the absurdity of some of its provisions. Against this preponderance of testimony was the sole argument of Dr. Loveberry. and Mayor Williams considered his reashallow to admit of serious re-

The Qualifications Section.

The section of the new ordinance relating to the qualifications of the inspec-tor and his assistant reads as follows: meat and livestock inspector shall be a qualified veterinarian, a graduate of an organized and recognized veterinary college, and of good standing in his profession; and have had some actual experience in meat inspection work." There is no apparent reason why the inspector should be obliged to possess such an inti-mate knowledge of the veterinary profes-sion, unless the idea was to shut out all applicants except favorites of the Government inspector, as it is claimed there are but few persons hereabouts capable of meeting these requirements. Furtherere, it is the general belief among those who are in a position to know that almost any skilled butcher is competent to pass judgment upon the healthfulness of an nimal's carcass.

It is contended also that Government Inspector Loveberry is stationed at the clant of the Pacific States Packing Company, near Fulton, and that the etablish-ment has become so obnoxious and offensive to the community that criminal ac rice is pending against it in the local Police Court for maintaining a nuisance, as well as a separate suit for maintaining a slaughter-house within the city limits, both of which cases are undecided, and it is furthermore alleged that the activity of the City Council in passing the ordiof the City Council in passing the ordinance over the Mayor's veto had its origin in a desire to shield the Pacific States Packing Company by legalizing its operations in a way through the passage of a measure that makes it the abattoir of all the meats entering the city from the surrounding country, amount the aggregate, to 60 per cent of all the meats consumed in Portland.

Mayor Williams' Veto.

Mayor Williams vetoed the ordinance after a very careful anlysis of the situa-tion, making use of the following lan-guage in returning the measure to the cil without his approval:

"Taking this ordinance altogether, I think its provisions impose too many and unnecessary regulations upon meat dealers, and subjects them to unnecessary labor and expense in providing the sary labor and expense in providing their meat for the market. An assistant Health Officer at a salary of 36 per month has recently been appointed to visit the meat shops, in the city and see that the busi-ness there is conducted in a proper man-ner. I do not believe that as a general rule the meat dealers of Portland are inclined to sell diseased or unwholesome meats to the people, because self-inter-est, if no other consideration, would in-duce them not to engage in that kind for any meat dealer who old sell to his customers such discused or unwholesome meats would be quite sure to lose the business of those cus-

"It seems to me that a plain and simple provision in an ordinance providing for regular and constant inspection of the meatshops of this city is all that is necessary to protect people from buying dis-cased or unwholesome meats." In discussing the situation yesterday, Thomas G. Farrell, of the firm of Everd-

ing & Farrell, local commission dealers, expressed himself freely upon the sub-ject, and it is believed that his views represent the sentiments of a great ma-jority of those directly interested.

The commission men of the city and the retaliers to a man," said Mr. Far-rell, "contend that there is no necessity of an ordinance of the severity of this one, and that if it is not a deliberate effort to turn the entire pork, veal and

"By the provisions of the ordinance all this class of meat shipped dressed to this city must be accompanied with the heart. this class of meat shipped dressed to this city must be accompanied with the heart, liver and lungs, and any person who knows anything of the matter, and gives it a thought, knows that this means spoiled meat almost every time. We have for months been instructing our shippers B. C., and other points. The mession was for months been instructing our shippers to leave nothing in the animals other than the livers, and that in the case of yeal only, and that in warm weather it is best to remove that also. In the case of pork it is a practical impossibility to ship them with anything left in them. By leaving the organs in the animals at any time it affords a biding place for flies; keeps the inside of the carcass moist and tends very much to small the carcass moist and tends were much to small the carcass and tends to the carcass much to make the carcas and tends to make the carcas and the carcas and tends to the carcas and the carca moist, and tends very much to spoll the same. "We contend that shippers finding that under the provisions of this ordinance, their goods arrive in a spoiled condition, will discontinue shipping dressed meat to this market. They may ship a good deal to Facoma and Seattle—where there is inspection on the right lines, and will be compelled to ship here alive. We contend that when they get a buyer of live, and he has accumulated a car of them and shipped the same to this city, they will—after going without eating for some days—be in a very poor condition to kill for human food. Leaving out this point, however, we contend that all commission merchants, all retail butchers, and all restaurants and small customers are directly interested, and are being imposed upon. "We contend that shippers finding that

Prices Will Increase.

"If yeal, pork and mutton have to be shipped alive, it means that a very few here will control the situation—that prices of the dressed product will be greatly increased—and that with all this fues and trouble and wrong, no real good will have

'The matter was apparently batched by the local inspector for the Bureau of Animal Industry. The ordinance, so be says, was drawn up by him, and he admitted to me that but one city in the Union, as far as he knew, had a similar ordinance, and this is Nashville, Tenn. In Seattle and other cities they have local city inspectors, who examine any meat that may come under their observai (livers, hearts and lungs out, of rse), and who, in the event that they anything the matter with it, destroy its usefulness as food by saturating it with coal oil.

etallers, are agreed that with such an aspector there would be no complaint to offer, but all are alarmed at the present attuation, for the fact of the matter is we on Front street have for months been seiling veal and pork to some of the wholesalers, and we think we can see our business in this line ruined if the our business in this line ruined if the law goes into effect and is not success-fully contested. The business is a large-one (yesterday we handled some 30 veal and five or six hogs in our store), and it is something that we do not feel like see-ing taken away from us and turned over to a few favored local killers.

The local butchers in this city depend, and have always depended for their year.

and have always depended, for their yeal and pork, from shippers in the country, who ship direct to them, or to the commission dealers. This is the case all over the United States as far as we can learn, with the one exception of Nashville."

The Star's Up-to-Date Bill.

But a few more opportunities remain to see the magnificent entertainment of cheerful vaudeville at the Star this week. The sensation of the bill is the marvelous club juggling of the Three Jordans, a trio that have made themselves famous the world over as the cleverest club jugglers on the vaudeville stage today. Other good acts on the programme are Sum-mers and Winters, who are up-to-date comedians, and their turn brings down the house at every performance. Appleby, the man who plays the banjo, can fairly make the instrument talk, and he plays a duct with two banjos at the same time. La Barr crawls through a lead pencil, and the rest of the bill is up to the usual standard of the Star's high policy of refined vaudeville.
