The Oregon building is the scene of constant activities, both official and social. The structure is well planned for all sorts of functions, its architecture being perfect from this viewpoint. Other State buildings labor under the disadvantage of having their exhibits under the same roof, and while this is most advantageous for the exhibits, it is a bit inconvenient when entertaining is going on. Mrs. Jefferson Myers, Oregon State hostess, is admirably fitted for her position, and the greeting she extends to young and old, rich and poor, is genial and wholesome. The county hostesses who take their station in the commodious reception rooms provided by the state for every Oregonian's entertainment, are made to feel perfectly at home by Mrs. Myers and assisted by her in every way possible.

While the rooms of the Oregon building are as large as the ordinary public hall, every day sees them profusely decorated with great quantities of fresh roses, which are sent to Mrs. Myers by her many friends here and from adjoining towns. At many of the receptions the past week roses were given to the guests in favor of the state. The Dalles made a feature of giving strawberries away at its reception last Thursday.

Official Entertaining There.

There are always things going at the New York building, in that all official entertaining is done there. The private restaurant draws the majority of New York visitors in the ground, and there are always distinguished callers. The dinner given by Commissioner and Mrs. Pratt Friday night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Goode was a big affair. Monday night there will be a reception by the Exposition management for the members of the union committee. Tuesday night Commissioner Brown will entertain the former students of Yale resident in Portland, calling it "Yale Night." The presence of Miss Luce at the New York building attracts many of the young set of Portland, with whom she had proved popular. She and the Browns will remain until the 15th or 20th, when their place will be taken by Commissioner and Mrs. Harry D. Williams, of Buffalo, who are expected to arrive about that time. Executive Officer and Mrs. J. Lancy Ellis will remain at the building all Summer.

The Missouri building is now in charge of Commissioner and Mrs. E. S. Garver, Mr. Garver, who is the secretary of the commission, Commissioner E. E. E. McJilms is also here, and R. H. Kern, president of the commission, will arrive here in the afternoon. There has been no formal entertaining at the Missouri building, from the fact that the annex is not completed. After it is finished a formal reception is planned, and it is probable that some form of entertainment will be given by the National Editorial Association, as both Commissioners Garver and McJilms are newspaper men. The decorations of this building are particularly attractive, especially the pictorial effects done in gables.

Y. W. C. A. Building Attracts.

The Y. W. C. A. building is attracting much attention, and the domestic science restaurant run in connection with it is doing good business. The building is open to the public, and there are few women who do not avail themselves of the convenience of the rest and retiring-rooms furnished for them. Miss Constance McCorkle is superintendent of the building. This week Miss Pacific, of Moscow, Idaho, is in charge of the dining-room, and next week Mrs. Anne Zoe Crayne, preceptress of the Normal School at Weston, will take her place.

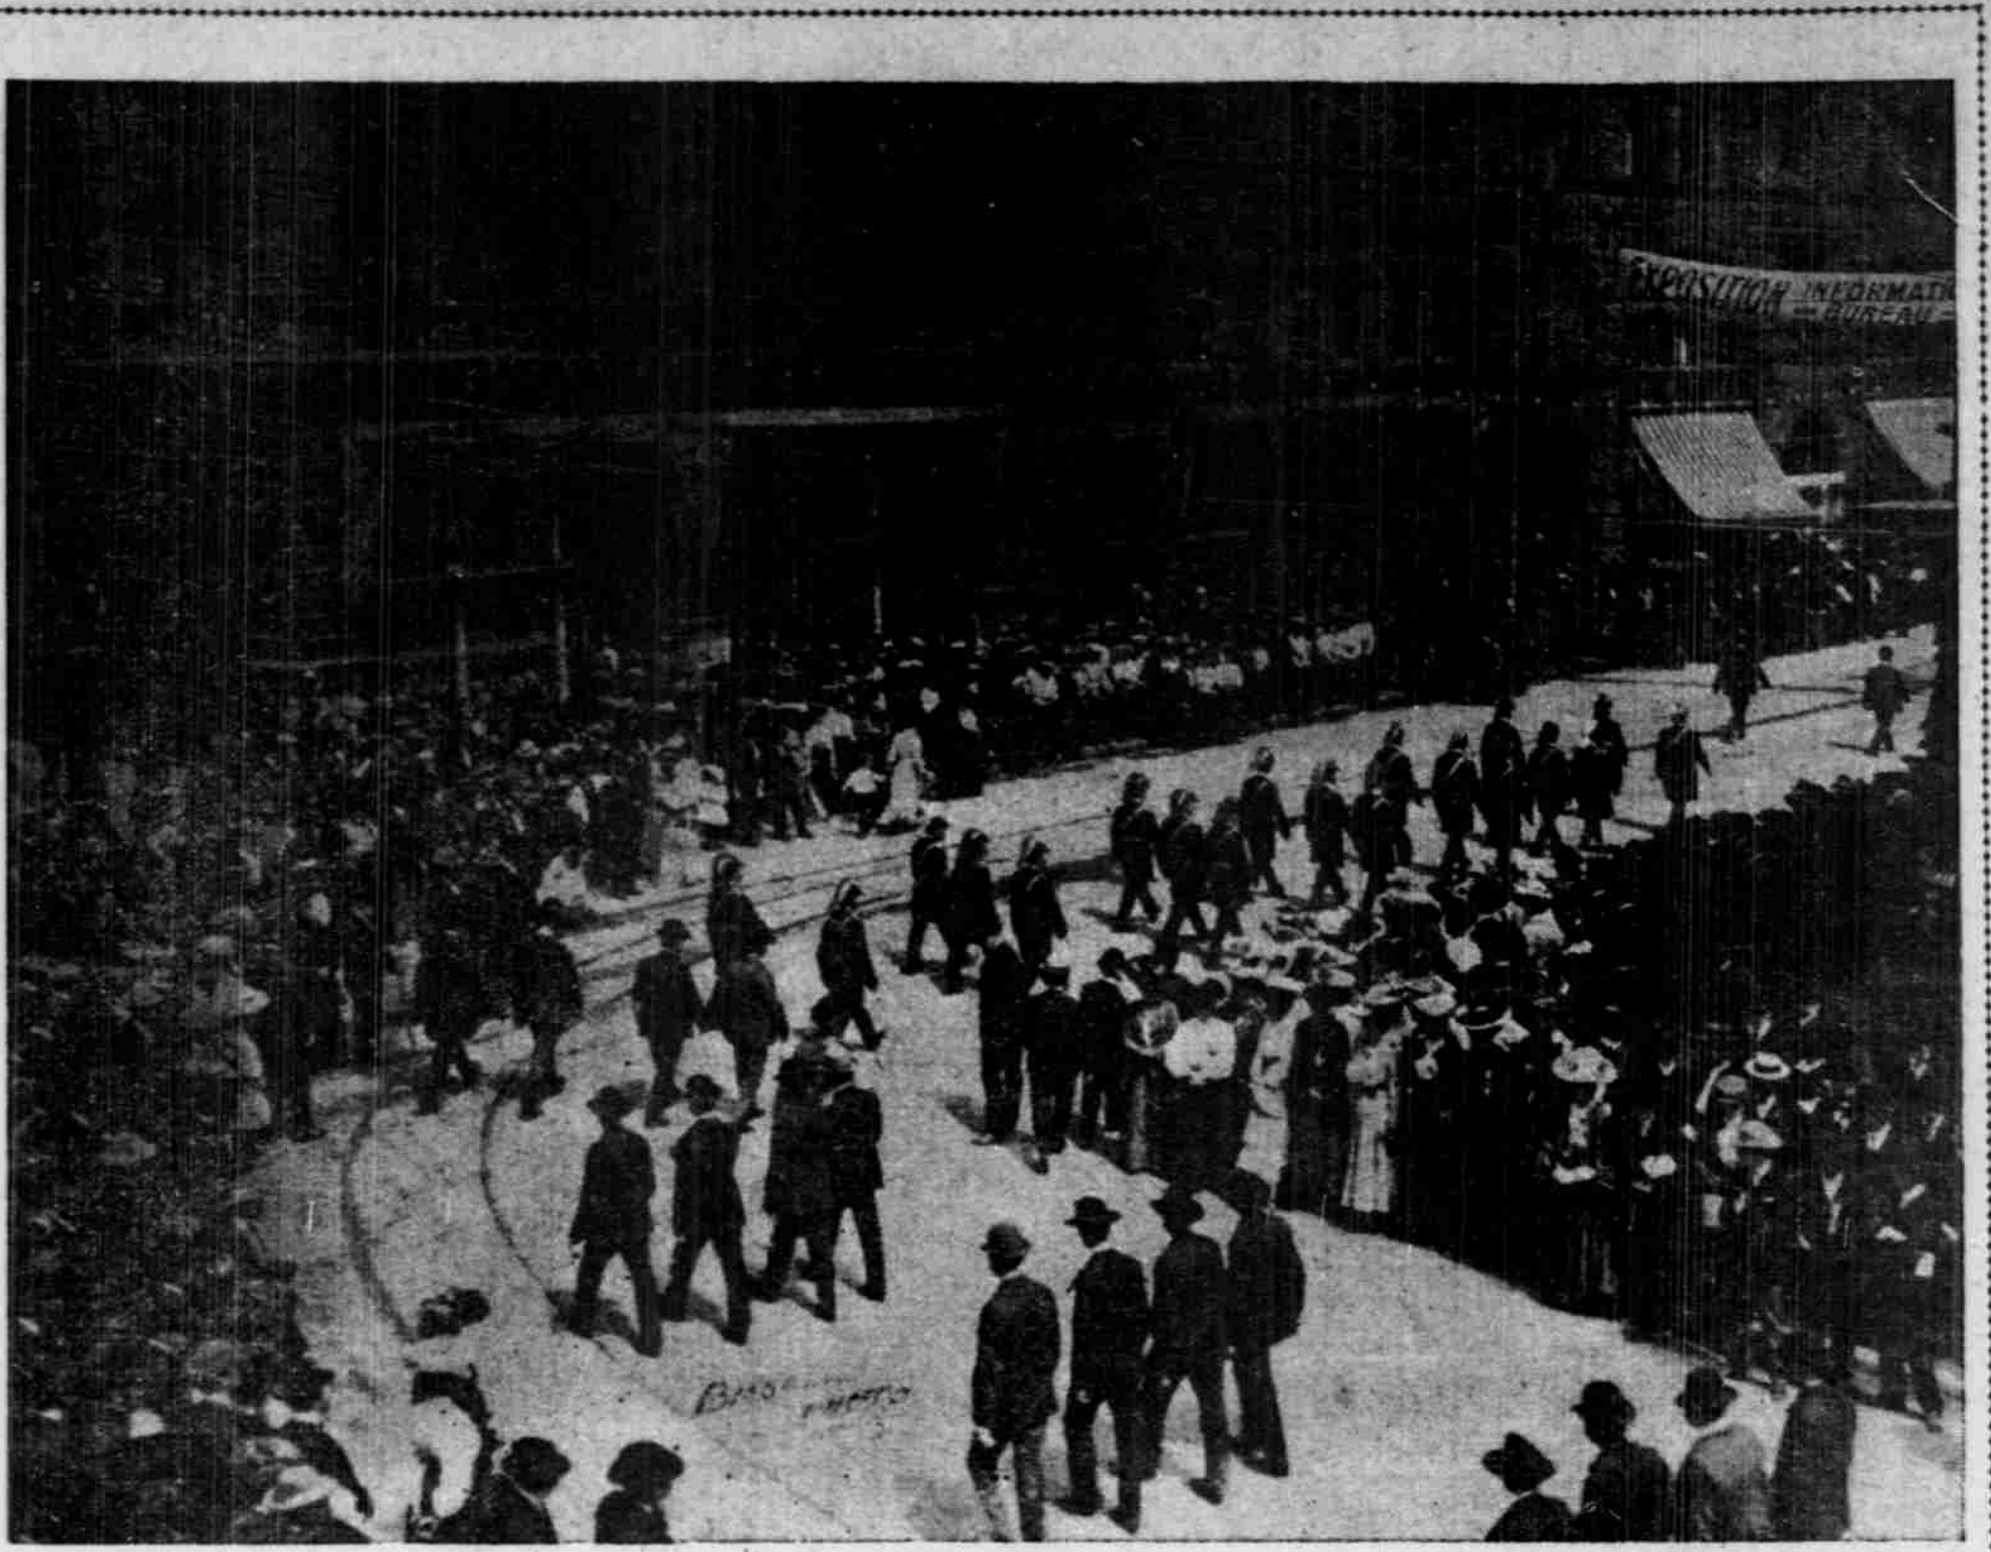

Despite the stormy weather of the early week, several hundred guests attended the opening reception in the Y. W. C. A. building, and much interest has been displayed in events there ever since. The luncheon given by the Midwestern Chapter of the D. A. R., will be in the Y. W. C. A. dining-rooms.

The Idaho building is probably more thoroughly "settled down" for the Summer than any other state building on the grounds. It is a gem architecturally, and the furnishings and general color effects inside are most tasteful and pleasing to the eye. Mrs. Adella B. Scott, the official hostess, is a woman of charm and distinction. She is a politician and county official in Idaho, and when citizens of that state call at the pretty building on the shore of Guilia's Lake, Mrs. Scott calls them by name and does not have to ask where they are from. She is ably assisted this month by Miss Lida Cox, of Boise; Mrs. Robert Hayes, of Pocatello; and Miss Elvira Fay, of Moscow. In July, other hostesses will come to assist her.

Governor Gooding and Staff.

Governor Gooding and his staff were entertained at the Idaho building when they were here at the opening of the Exposition, but aside from this no formal entertaining has been done. Mrs. Scott and her husband and the Commissioners live in the building, having ideal suites of rooms and a model dining-room and kitchen. The furnishings of the ladies' reception-room were bought with subscriptions volunteered by the women of Idaho, and are a credit to all who contributed.

much attention, and of which Idaho is very proud, as she won it in competition for the best fruit raised by irrigation. The vase cost $50, and was given by Senator William Clark, of Montana, his state, Idaho and Utah competing for it.

There is a happy family at the California building, and lots of young folks are there. Governor Pardee's four daughters are there for the Summer, and one of the Commissioners has a daughter, and the other a niece. Mrs. Pardee will also remain at the building all Summer and assist Mrs. Frank Virginia, the official hostess. When the California promotion committee comes up next week these ladies and Commissioners will entertain them, including one box reception, on Tuesday. Wednesday there will be a card reception given Mrs. Pardee, the Governor's wife.

Things have been quiet at the Massachusetts building, for the fact that Mrs. W. H. Fairbanks, the official hostess, has been ill for a week. There will be no social activities by Massachusetts before the 15th, when the formal dedication and opening will take place. On that occasion Mrs. Fairbanks will be assisted by Mrs. Theodore Wilcox, whose husband will represent Governor Douglas. A big party of New England school teachers, which is being sent out by the Boston Herald, is expected in July, but as Commissioner and Mrs. Fairbanks will be in Alaska at that time the New England Society will entertain these ladies. A party of it will be here for the opening, all sent by the Governor, and including many distinguished people of Massachusetts.

Neither the Illinois nor Colorado buildings are ready to open, and the Utah building is still incomplete.

HAS FINE MINERAL EXHIBIT

It is Installed in the Washington State Building.

Among the very finest mineral collections at the Exposition is that in the Washington building, installed by Colonel Frank J. Parker, of the Walla Walla Statesman. This collection is one of rare beauty and interest, containing specimens from all over the world, and is attracting wide attention.

The gathering of these mineral specimens represents the work of more than 20 years. Every part of the world is represented from Greenland to Australia. It is regarded as the most complete private collection on the Pacific Coast. One hundred and fifty feet of shelving are required to display the rocks, ores and minerals, and even in this large space the specimens appear crowded.

Included in the collection are fine samples of ores from Silver City, Idaho, mines, such as the Poorman, Red Jacket, Golden Charter, Illinois Central and others. Besides specimens of pure gold and silver there is an excellent showing in tin ores from different parts of the globe, some very fine specimens coming from the famous Dolcoath mine in Cornwall. One of the natural silver specimens weighs 53 ounces. The showing in copper is exceptionally complete, and there is possibly no finer on the Coast. Japan is represented with a handsome piece of stibnite. From Derbyshire, England, is a fine specimen of fluor spar. Western and Pacific Coast minerals are fully shown, and all in all the collection is one well worth seeing.

BIG STOCK SHOW ASSURED

California, the Sound Country and the Middle West Will Compete.

Interest is general in the coming livestock show at the Lewis and Clark Exposition, and the hearty support of all great stock centers of the West, Middle West and Pacific Coast is assured. M. D. Wisdom, superintendent of the livestock show department, made a report yesterday to Secretary H. E. Reed showing the result of his journey throughout the districts named. The report sets out that stockmen everywhere are talking of the Lewis and Clark Exposition, and are preparing to send their best animals to Portland. Competition is to be exceedingly strong. Mr. Wisdom finds, benefiting by past exhibitions, breeders and growers know what to send, he says, and those who expect to get awards must attain a high degree of excellence.

"I do not believe local people need to feel the least bit discouraged," said he, in discussing the matter. "From what I saw of stock elsewhere, Oregon may safely hope for a goodly share of the awards. We have as fine stock here as anywhere, and I expect Oregon to come out of the contest with flying colors. Oregon growers have every advantage, as they will have no great distance to transport their animals."

"Everywhere I went I found stock people interested in our show," continued Mr. Wisdom. "California, where I went first, will be largely represented, and ought to get away with a number of good awards. From California I jumped to Kansas City, and found that Missouri will be represented, especially with Shorthorn and Hereford cattle. In Minnesota and other Middle Western States many fine animals are being groomed for shipment, and the same may be said of Montana and the Puget Sound country."

"Aside from the benefits to the stock industry to be gained through the show, the Exposition will profit to an unexpected extent in the matter of attendance. The show will bring thousands, who would come for no other reason. To this class, and it is a numerous class, the stock show is the greatest drawing card in the world and the greatest form of entertainment for them."

The stock show opens August 1 for cattle, sheep, swine, goats and poultry. On August 25 the horse show opens. Five awards have been provided for each class, thus making the show a broad one.

ALL SALEM WILL COME.

June 14 Will Find the Capital on the Trail.

SALEM, Or., June 9.—(Special.)—"This Town Will Move to Portland June 14. Meet us on the Trail." This is the legend displayed on a huge banner that has been suspended across the lower end of State street, where it can be seen by all who traverse either State or Commercial streets. The banner was hung up by a committee of the Greater Salem Commercial Club, which has had in charge the arrangements for a Salem day at the Lewis and Clark Fair.

The Southern Pacific will run a special train from here on the morning of June 14, returning that night as late as may suit the convenience of the people who go from this city. A number of the leading business men are selling tickets and urging a large attendance from here.

Vehicles Not Admitted.

Beginning Monday morning, June 12, no vehicles with supplies, excepting automobile trucks, will be admitted to the Exposition grounds, by order of the director of works.

ODDFELLOWS HAVE PARADE

Three Thousand Form in the Line of March to the Exposition.

EXERCISES AT THE FAIR

Three thousand Oddfellows marched through the streets of Portland yesterday morning in a gigantic parade, ten blocks long, and then made their way to the Exposition grounds, where exercises in their honor were held in the Auditorium. President H. W. Goode and Jefferson Myers delivered addresses of welcome, and prominent members of the fraternity responded with stirring speeches.

For weeks, Oddfellows from all parts of the Northwest and Eastern States as well have been planning for yesterday's demonstration. The length of the procession exceeded anything that has been seen in the city for years, and the enthusiasm of the participants therein was intense.

The great parade assembled on Alder street, near the Oddfellows' Temple at First. Between 9 and 10 o'clock the streets became packed with people, and by the time the procession was ready to start, roadway and sidewalk were jammed with a living mass of humanity.

Shortly after 10 o'clock, the time set for the start, Grand Marshal Owen Summers gave the order to march, and the great crowd melted away into a column of fours, headed by Police Captain Moore and a platoon of patrolmen, who cleared the street.

Line of March.

The line of march included Third, Burnside, Sixth, Taylor, Fourth, Jefferson and Alder streets, and as the vast army filed through the busiest thoroughfares of the city, applause burst from every window and from every corner. Thousands saw the procession, and cheered it onward.

Three bands furnished martial strains, De Caprio's and two sections of Schuchler's emergency musicians. Music rolled from every side, as the human column filed along. Some of the marchers were clad in every-day attire, while others wore gorgeous uniforms of their order, but they all marched arm in arm, for they were all brothers in the fraternity.

After touring the city, the parade finally came to the Exposition grounds, turning the temple at First and Alder streets. Here it was disbanded and the members started for the Exposition grounds. Cars were packed at every window, through once the members of the Exposition, and room on the footpaths was at a premium. Hundreds waited until after luncheon before going to the grounds, but many started in the morning in order to make the day on the lake as long as possible.

The influx was soon felt by the Exposition people, for at 12 o'clock the gates were closed and several hundred ahead of what it was at the same time on the previous day. A continual stream of sightseers, wearing on their heads the various badges of Oddfellows' day, poured in at every turnstile, and flooded the grounds.

By 3 o'clock there were more than 2000 Oddfellows and their wives on the grounds. Then, the exercises in the Auditorium began.

Hall Well Decorated.

The hall was very attractively decorated, and every chair on the lower floor was full, and many in the gallery. The speakers, and the presiding officer, J. C. Jameson, occupied seats on the stage, together with the members of Innes' Band, who played soft strains while the visitors arrived and took their seats.

After the opening ode, a prayer was offered by A. LeRoy, D. D., grand chaplain. This was followed by an address of welcome by H. W. Goode, president of the Exposition.

Mr. Goode sketched a few of the important events in connection with the progress of the Fair, and bid the visitors a hearty welcome in the name of the corporation. His remarks were received with hearty applause, and W. T. Williamson, past grand master, offered a short response in behalf of the fraternity, thanking the Exposition officials, and accepting their kind services.

During the intermission Bohumil Kryl, accompanied by Innes' Band, played a cornet solo that captivated the audience. Mr. Kryl's low notes being a feature of the performance.

Address by Myers.

Governor George E. Chamberlain was to have welcomed the Oddfellows for the people of Oregon and the State Commission, but he was unavoidably absent, and in his place Jefferson Myers made this address of welcome. Mr. Myers told the audience of the state appropriation for the Exposition, and how the provisions of the act had been carried out. His speech was responded to by E. M. Rand, of Washington. After the close of the exercises, Innes' Band played selections from "The Serenade," by Victor Herbert.

"After the exercises had come to a close, the visitors inspected the various buildings and exhibits, and walked through all parts of the grounds. Some returned homeward during the afternoon, but many stayed to witness the illumination in the evening."

Tonight there will be a meeting of the general committee at Oddfellows' Temple at First and Alder streets. This meeting will be called at 8 o'clock in the library.

Conspicuous in yesterday's exercises were members of the Affiliated Order of Rebekahs, who were present during the parade, and attended the exercises in large numbers.

Auto Race Across Continent.

The automobile race from Detroit to the Exposition continues merrily and the latest report from the struggling drivers indicate they are having rather an arduous time along some bad Western roads. A report was received by the Exposition Press Bureau yesterday, from Green River, Wyo., where the leaders were on the afternoon of June 5. It stated that they were having no end of excitement in crossing swollen streams and mountain trails, but that the machine was holding up well and they have learned to fear nothing in the way of roads. "Old Scout" is the name of the leading vehicle. The machine in the rear left Laramie last Saturday morning and is struggling along close in the wake of the leader.

Will Be Hostess for Colfax.

Mrs. Ivan Chase will be the hostess of the Washington building at the Exposition grounds next week for Colfax County.
