Italians Hired to Locate.

Italians made the entries which the Government charges were illegally filed. According to the Government's statement of the case, Barrett entered into a contract with Joseph Placine, agreeing to pay him $1000 each for timber claims, upon which he located his countrymen and upon which final proof was made. Placino's share came through his own agreement with the Italians that he was to be paid 1160 each to locate them upon timber lands. The fellow-countrymen of Piscino became suspicious and Piscino is said to have exhibited to them the contract he had with Barrett to keep them

It was because the trouble stirred up the Italian colony at Spokane that the agents of the Government learned of the scheme. The foreigners talked too much and were too suspicious. The end came when the grand jury took up the case and Placino told his version of the entire matter before that investigating The four indictments were then returned
