Further Strength Is Given to Wheat Prices by Reports of Damage by Hessian Fly in Nebraska.

SAN PRANCISCO, June 13.-(Special.)-Spot wheat remained steady, but barier sold at a lower range. A carload of new cats, sold to arrive at $1.40, was delivered. The first sample of new coop yo was shown on change, and a sule to strive made at $1.50. A feature of interest to the grain trade was the return of George W. McNear. R. D. Girvin and Thomas Binney, the latter of Balfour, Guthrie & Co., from a three days sutamobile trip through the wheat lands of fan Josouis. They state that the reports automobile trip through the wheat lands of San Joaquin. They state that the reports of very aerious damage to the crop have leen exaggerated, and say the prespects favor a reasonably large yield. Mr. Girvin eldi-mates that the wheat cpp of the state will be from 800,000 to 700,000 tons. The fruit market was heavily supplied with acricots and nearbox niums green apples apricots and peaches, pluma, green appies and pears also arrived freely, causing generally easy prices. Cherries were in light supply and high. Cantaloupes and watermelons are arriving regularly from the south. Clima fruits were steady. Banamas are better cleaned up.

Beccipts of river potatoes were less liberal.

FAVORABLE CROP WEATHER.

Winter Wheat Harvest in Central States

Winter Wheat Harvest in Central States

Begun.

WASHINGTON. June 18.—The Westher Bureau's weekly summary of crop conditions, issued today, says:

As a whole, the weather was favorable for the cultivation of crops. Throughout the mountain and Pacific Coast district the weather was generally favorable. The central Winter wheat harvest has begun as far north as the central portion of Kaness. On the Pacific Coast the Winter wheat outlook continues promising, exceptionally so in Washington.

Spring wheat is also doing well on the North Pacific Coast, the outlook in Washington being the hest in years. In the lake region the apple outlook is more or less promising, except to some sections.

as deserters.

There was great activity among the policemen and detectives when the desertions were posted. A description of each man was left at police headquarters, ending with the statement that there was a reward of $10 for each one returned to the critics.

The cruiser Marblehead is scheduled to sail at an early date, and Commander F. H. Holmes is anxious that the police pick up the desertors, as the ship is short-handed as it is now.

The Marblehead put into Portland harbor as a representative of the Navy.

to the Lewis and Clark Exposition. The men found the climate so fine here, and the people so congenial that many of them determined to desert and remain.

The men who deserted the Marblehead took advantage of their snore leave, granted them while in port. Through friends, it is supposed, they secured civilian clothing and laid aside their uniforms. This makes them difficult to capture. All day yesterday and through the night policemen were keeping close watch for deserters, but up to a late hour none and been captured. This is thought to be no fault of the officers, but is said to be due to the fact that those who have left the Marblehead are keeping in hiding somewhere, probably at the homes of their friends. All day yesterday the dezen or more patrolmen who line Washington, Mor-rison and Third streets peered through the burrying throngs for some sign of deserters, but not a sign saw they Should the police capture the ten deserters, they would earn a total of $100.
