RUMELIN VERDICT IS NOT GUILT

Jury, After Seven Hours of Deliberation, Comes Into Court.

STUBBORN FIGHT AT FIRST

Several Ballots Are Necessary Before a Verdict for the Defendant Is Finally Returned and He Is Freed.

After deliberations lasting seven hours, the jury in the Charles E. Rumelin case returned a verdict of not guilty at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Rumelin was not present in the couriroom when the verdict was read, and neither were his attorneys, James Gleason and C. E. S. Wood. There was a stubborn fight in the juryroom before an agreement was reached. On the first ballot the jury stood seven for acquittal and five for con-viction. The ballot changed to eight to four, and after considerable discussion the ballot was ten to two, and at 5 p'clock the jury came together. At the former trial the jury disagreed, standing seven to five in favor of Rumelin

The charge against him was that he offered a bribe to William C. Elliott when the latter was City Engineer to have Elliott find fault with the bid of the Pacific Construction Company, of Everett, Wash, for the construction of the Front-street bridge, so that the bid would be rejected by the Executive Board, and the bid of the Pacific Construction Company, of San Francisco, accepted. The difference between the two blds was $5000. Elliott testified that Rumeili, told him there was $5000 in it, and he (Elliott) would receive his share. George Scoggin testified that Rumelin was active in trying to have the bid of the Everett company re-

Rumelin positively denied the statement made by Elliott, and called witnesses to show that he instigated the investigation of the Tanner Creek sewer scandal which caused Elliott to lose his position, and Elliott was attempting to secure revenge

THE ARID LANDS

Congressional Irrigation Committee Reached Portland Yesterday.

TRIP CROWDED WITH WORK

What the Visitors Have Seen and What They Hope to See Accomplished on the Dry Sands of the West.

The Congressional irrigation committee which arrived in Portland yesterday afon, is touring the West, making s emprehensive study of the reclamation of arid lands. There is no junket about it; it is a trip crowded with work, and plenty of it. The two days' visit to Portland is the first real rest the committee has enjoyed since it started on its tour, more than three weeks ago, and, with the exception of a visit to Fuget Sound tomorrow, will be the only breathing spell on the entire Journey.

The Congressional party organized in Kansas City on June I, went direct to El Paso, Tex., where an inspection was made of an irrigation project in course of construction on the Rio Grande River. June II the Congressional party turned water into the recently completed canals of the Truckee-Carson project, Nevada, thus marking the beginning of reclamation under a Government system, and likewise commemorating the third anniversary of the signing of the National irrigation law. Since that time the party has made a Since that time the party has made a study of irrigation conditions in Utah, has inspected two large projects which are in course of construction in Southern Idaho, as well as the recently completed Twin Pails project, in that state, and, after viewing a portion of the lands under the Malheur project, in Eastern Oregon, came direct to Portland.

The Malheur County Project.

The brief drive from Arcadia to Ontario afforded but scant opportunity for the vis-iting Congressmen to see what is to be done under the Malheur project, but opportunity was given to see the type of lands proposed to be reclaimed, and irri-gation under private canals demonstrated what may be expected when the Govern-ment furnishes water for the entire Mai-heur tract. The soil in the Maiheur counneur tract. The soit in the Maineur coun-sey is equal to that of any other project that has been visited; the land, for the most port, lies well, and there is an abun-dance of it. The presence of alkali, how-ever, will require drainage, and this will materially increase the cost of the project. F. H. Newell, chief engineer of the Reclamation Service predicts a bright Reclamation Service, predicts a bright future for the Maiheur country. He is confident that existing differences will soon be adjusted and that the actual construction of the project will result Once the land is irrigated, he believes it will be rapidly settled; the quality the soil the climate, the abundance of water and transportation facilities combining to make it one of the most attractive projects of the entire West. Newell believes the wagon road com-pany, owning 30,000 acres under the Malheur project, will sign up their en-tire holding within the next two or three months, thereby removing the only serious obstacle that now keeps the government out of this field.

Earth Will Begin Too Fly.

The Malheur project, as originally planned, was estimated to cost $30 per acre. Subsequent investigation shows that the cost will be $40. Many farmers owning lands under this projecfear they will not be able to pay this high price for water in ten equal an-nual installments, and they have asked the government to reduce their first the government to reduce their first payments below $4 an acre in order that they may not be hardshipped. They are willing to make larger payments during the last few years covered by their contracts, in order to bring the average up to $4. This plan is still under consideration at Washington. When this question is adjusted and flual signed agreement is made with the owners of the wagon road lands, there is every assurance that dirt will begin to fly on the government pro-ject in the Malheur country.

Everywhere the committee has heard high commendation of the officials of the Reclamation Service, who are con-structing works under Government projects heretofore authorized. Furthermore, the committee is convinced that the enforcement of the reclamation law is in competent hands. Reclamation en-gineers have proved to be men of high attainments and ability.

Entertained in Portland.

When the Congressional committee drew into Portland at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, it was met at the depot by E. T Perkins, who has charge of the Govern ment's reclamation exhibit at the Expo-sition, and Tom Richardson, manager of the Portland Commercial Club, who es-corted the distinguished visitors to a special car in which they were conveyed to the Fair grounds. There a dainty luncheon was served in the New York building, at which President H. W. Goode extended the party a welcome on behalf of the Exposition. At the conclusion of the repast the usual order of events was speech-making. But this was dispensed with for members of DAY BOAT FOR ASTORIA the party made it known that they were, anxious to see the Exposition.
