UMPIRE'S BAD EY

Caused Giants to Lose Game With Tacoma.

Teddy Corbett Pitches Great Game, but Team Goes to Pieces When McCredie Is Ordered From Field by the Umpire.

One day, not so very long ago, some one down California way told a mis-guided youth by the name of Fred Perrine, otherwise known as "Bull," that he was gifted with all the necessary requisites of an indicator handler, and un-fortunately for the fans of Portland and Pitcher Teddy Corbett, this would-be official believed his informant, and yesterday in one of the weirdest exhibi-tions of umpiring contributed with his might and main toward boosting Colonel Mique and his Tiger Lads apward in the percentage column How well "Bull" succeeded can be readily ascertained by interviewing any fear-minded slover of baseball who wit-nessed yesterday's flasco at Mulinomah Field, for on at least three separate and distinct occasions Perrine made his pre-ence felt by particularly odious deci-pable enough to grace any position, but in order to perform the duties of an um-pire, they must have the same qualities that would be required of any other per-son. Perrine's qualities for his position are so minute that they are not in evidence at all.

His first glaring offense was commit-ted in the third inning, when, with Mc-Credie on second and Mitchell on first and no one out, he called the manager out at second after first having waved him safe of a snap throw from Graham, when Eagan had jokingly pushed Mc-Credie's foot off the bag. Naturally the local manager was extremely hostile to down-right robbery of this kind, and pro-tested vigorously, the result of which was his expulsion from the grounds.

The loss of the manager necessitated a switch of the team, for Murphy had to be called into action and take the manager's place in right field. This reversal of a decision probably cost the game right there, for had McCredle been on nd, as he was entitled, McLean would have come up in that inning, and as the big catcher led off in the fourth with a safe hit, one or two runs would have re-

His Second Mistake.

The next instance of Perrine's flerce rork came in Tacoma's half of the fourth, when he called Nordyke safe at the plate on McLaughlin's two-bagger to center, which Householder and Schlaffy relayed to McLean, who clearly tagged Dyke out, for he had not touched the register yet, having slid in in front of the plate on which McLean was standing, making it impossible for the runner to touch th

ame without moving the young giant, and this Nordyke did not do.

The third instance of the umpire's poor judgment came in the eighth, when after Schiafly had doubled, he called a perfect bunt by Householder foul, when it was a fair hit, and Eddie had it bent a block. Householder then found the next two householder then formed was 4800. The score:
