USE BUTTS OF REVOLVERS

Because Robert Eggert, Bartender, and J. C. Hoyt, Visitor, Do Not. Hold Up Hands Quickly, They Are Assaulted.

Two masked men held up the bartender, Robert Eggert, and J. Charles Hoyt, a visitor, at the Corner saloon at Twentyfirst and Thurman streets at 12:30 o'clock this morning and after hitting the occupants of the saloon with the butts of revolvers they robbed the money drawer of $15. John Lambert and Charles Kuhne, both natives of Germany, were arrested by Detective Reising and taken to the station, where the former was positively identified by Hoyt as the man who hit him over the head.

Both men entered the saloon shortly before 12:30 o'clock wearing masks, and approached the bartender and his companion who were sitting at a table. They were commanded to throw up their hands, but failing to do so at the command they were struck over the head and told to pay attention to business. Both men bled profusely and when the police arrived the resembled a slaughter-hou The floor and the bar were covered with blood and the clothes of Hoyt and Eggert were smeared with it.

While one of the robbers covered both men with a revolver the other went behind the bar and removed the money. Pa-trol-driver Price, Patrolman O'Brien and Detective Resing reached the saloon a few minutes after the hold-up took place. Lambert and Kuhne were placed under arrest before they had left the barroom. Hoyt is positive that Lambert is the one who hit him, but Eggert is unable to say positively that either of the men is the one who committed the robbery. Eggert was dazed when taken to the station, partly from drink and partly from ers working at the Seven-Mile House on the Linnton road, and to have walked in from that place since 10 minutes to 11 They said last night that they were able to prove an allbi and denied that they had anything to do with the hold-up.
