that the men of the city are too en-grossed with the cares of the Exposition to pay heed to the visitors here, but that should not be. When you go to Kansas City the princes of commerce there have time to shake you by the there have time to shake you by the hand; to speak to you as you pass, and when the Commercial Congress meets there next year it will be welcomed by the city and by the leading men of the city, who will find time to exercise the courtesies of hosts."

It was not all censure that the guest had to say however, for on every other point he was an enthusiast concerning what he had seen and heard. "Of all the things most interesting to mc." he said, "the Forestry Building stands first. In contents and in material and in construction it is a thing unique and wonderful. It is almost inconceivable to us of the West as we look at the wonders of the Northwest."

The voltor soil in glowing terms of the comparisons between the climate of Oregon and that of other places in which he had lived. It was a place that ex-celled Old Mexico which had the most wonderful and perfect climate in the wonderful and perfect climate in the world. To come to Portland and the valley at the end of the long ride across the country was like reaching the dream-land garden of Paradise.

Missouri had it over this state in on thing however and that was in its sol and its corn. In no place under the sur can be found such soll or such corn a is boasted by the state and inhabitants of the corn cob meerschaum state. Railroads are the thing needed today in Oregon, the speaker argued, and they must be had before the state would or could be great and powerful in compari-son to those of the East. J. J. Hill is a man of destiny; one who never did or said a foolish thing, and in the opinion of the Missouri ex-Governor, will work out the selvation of the country, if lot alone, even if Harriman never does anything

Governor Crittendon left last night for his home, over the Northern Pacific, re-gretting that he did not have the time and opportunity to make an extended and opportunity to make an extended tour of the state to see more closely all of the wonderful things to be found here.

Authority on Early History.

Professor William I. Marshall, prin-cipal of Gladstone Public School, Chi-engo, who is in Portland to attend the Historical Congress which will hold its fast session this evening at the First Presbyterian Church, has been a most different of Pacific Coast his-Preabyterian Church, has been a most diligent student of Pacific Coast his-tory, particularly with respect to the part played in the development of the Pacific Northwest by the early mis-sionaries, Dr. Marcus Whitman and his contemporaries. The mass of original data he has secured in this connection, which will be published before long, is actonishing. estanishing.
