Notwithstanding the Trail and the amusement enterprises were open, Sunday services were held in the Auditorium at the Lewis and Clark Exposition yesterday afternoon. Dr. Andrew S. Draper, Commissioner of Education for the State of New York, and one of the most dis tinguished educators in the United States, was the speaker. He took as his subject, The Church and Popular Education More people were meated in the Auditorium yesterday afternoon, than attended of the Sunday services, which were held the first few weeks the Exposition was open. There were fully 1000 people present, the entire lower floor being filled. Yesterday was the fist time that Bunday services have been be since the opening of the Trail attractions on the Sabhath. When the concessionaires were first allowed to operate on the Sabbath, it was generally expected that the services would be abandoned, as the min-istry of Portland was bitterly opposed to the opening of the Trail. While no action was taken by the Lewis and Clark Expo-sition Committee on Congresses and Conferences, cancelling the engagements, Dr. Josiah Strong, of New York, and Re-Charles M. Sheldon, of Topeka, Kan., refused to speak in the Auditorium on Sun-day. The two ministers who declined to deliver sermons stated that when they accented the invitation extended them by

Owing to the refusal of Drs. Strong and Sheldon to speak, no services were held on the Sundays scheduled for their appearance. Dr Draper accepted the invita-tion of the committee before the Sunday opening of the Trail had been ordered by the courts, but he did not follow the precedent set by Drs. Strong and Sheldon, Dr. Washington Gladden, of the Congregational Church, of Columbus, O., is the only remaining minister who has been invited to speak at the Auditorium on Sunday. No word has been received from him as to whether he will accept or decline. It is not probable that the com-

Dr. Draper is not a pastor, nor has be ever been a clergyman. He had devoted nearly his entire life to educational work, and is a strong and earnest Christian. He is known as an authority on religious matters. Dr. Draper was for ten years president of the University of Illinois This he resigned to accept the appoint ment as Commissioner of Education for the State of New York. He was a member of the United States Board of Com missioners on the Alabama Claims. He has been president of the National Assoclation of School Superintendents, and is in Portland primarily to deliver an address before the Educational Congress to-

What Dr. Draper Said.

Dr. Draper's address yesterday might be lermed the expressions of a layman, adapted to Sunday services. He discussed largely the relations of school and church and, while being far from an orator, is attractive and interesting speaker He has a very decided and distin meaning of the word 'education.' There is an education of the heart as well us of the mind; there is an education of the body, which is the imperative accompaniment of the beaithful training of the intellectual powers, as well as of the healthful training of the emotions. Education is not confined to what is found in books or mught in schools. It would be a pity if it were. Indeed, the greater part of education comes from en-vironment-from the influences which bear down upon us.

"Experience is a great teacher. One may turn the rough ore into iron beams, or steel rails, or razor blades, or cambric needles, or watch springs—it all depends upon the kind and extent of the treatment. It is contact with the material which determines the value of the fin-ished product. It is just so with the human faculties. The influence of the schools has a momentous bearing upon the development of the mind and soul momentous in itself, and still more momentous because it prepares the ground for all the other influences and makes other contacts fruitful. All the other influences frequently outnumber and out-weigh the influences of the schools. The whole world is relative. What we are depends very largely upon the road we have traveled, the person to whom and the things to which we have been related.

National Effect of Education.

"The education of the nation is meas-red by the extent to which the life of the people has been energized. National energy is generated by the contacts which result from freedom of movement, freedom of thought, and freedom of ex-pression among the people. Action pro-duces power. Great movements among people have invariably sharpened their wits and advanced their civilization. There is nothing so discouraging as stagnation. Slavery in whatever form-to ignorance, to caste, to superstition, to kingly or military power-is the greatest emy of education. When a nation is bondage of any kind the will of the dividual counts for little and the national thought is weak.

"Great national movements do not fol-low sentiment, or passion, or caprice. They rest upon the impulses of the heart and the convictions of the mind. They are inspired by the spirit of the Almighty God working in the lives of men. Conience movements never fail. They may delayed, but they always accumulate In numbers as they gain in power; and they succeed in the end. "Christianity has been more potent than any other force in breaking the bonds of ignorance, superstition and caste, in which the world's people were held through long cycles of time. Education. as well as religiously considered, birth of Christ is the most wonderful and consequential event in all the world's history."

Pyramids Monuments to Power.

Dr. Draper then proceeded to delve in ancient history for proof in support of his ideas, holding that while the Persians and Egyptians have left evidences of mechanical skill, the pyramids are merely proof of the absolute power of the mon-arch rather than of intellectual virility among the people; that while Greece made great advances in art, four-fifths her people were slaves to one-fifth. and that her temples crumbled because her moral and civic conditions were not h as to maintain them.

"We know about the Roman republic," said, "the growth of the Roman law, and the power of the Roman legions: but we know, also, that the Roman re-public was a republic in name only; that the law was developed as the harsh instrument of absolutism; and that the strength of the legions rested, not upon onscience, but upon blind obedience to the commands of a master."

After reciting the history of religious progress since those dark ages, and tell-ing about the amaigamation of church and school wherever education rules, he

Deceased Came With Oldest Families and Has Been Identified With the State Growth.

Ira Perry Smith, better known to his riends as "Uncle" Perry Smith, died yesterday morning at the home of his son-in-law, Dr. I. T. Mason, 788 Kerby street, Mr. Smith was one of the early pioneers, having come to Oregon with the Judge Kimsey party in 1847. Mr. Smith was born in Andrew County. Missouri, October 5, 1823. His first wife died before he came West, and their four children died within a few years of the death of their mother. Upon his arrival in Oregon, he settled on a farm in Polk County, where he resided for about 20 years, and where he married Elizabeth Price, a member of one of the best known of the early Oregon families.

About 1885 the family moved to Colfax, Wash. While in Washington, Mr. Smith served one term as County Commissioner of Whitman County. In the early 80s they returned to Polk County, where he resided up to a few years ago, when he came to Portland. Dr. Hope, before introducing Dr. Draper, said that it was gratifying to be present at the renewal of the Sunday services, and that he sincerely hoped there would be more of them. Dr. Draper was greeted with applicable when he rose to ing member of a family of 11 children The deceased was prominent among the early pioneers. The party with which he came to Oregon included the Applegates, the Gilliams and other families, the names of whom are familiar to all who know the history of the early days in Oregon. One of our well-known bachelor ranchers below town became tired of his single blessedness and conceived the idea of taking unto himself a wife. at the Belasco Tonight. This is a memorable day in the theatrical annals of Portland, for this evening there will be introduced to this public the greatest stock actress in America in the person of Lillian Lawrence, who assumes the leading feminine part in the splendid Belasco Stock Company. It is significant that her first appearance will be in one of the roles in which she has been most successful, "Alice of Old Vincennes," pronounced by the greatest critics in the world as the most effective historicalromantic drama ever written. Of course you have read the famous novel from which it was dramatized, and will want which it was dramatized, and will want to see the play. With Lillian Lawrence and Will Walling in the leading roles and the others of the company happily cast, "Alice of Old Vincennes" should

Mindreader Returns as Headliner at Popular Theater.

After an absence of several weeks, Tatum returns to the Grand today to resume his position as headliner on a strong vaudeville bill. Tatum is a psy-chologic wonder. His demonstrations in mind-reading and telepathy are most mystifying and cause more comment and wonder than any other act in vaudeville. Tatum answers questions without having seen them, and this is one of the many interesting feats he performs. Manager Errickson, of the Grand, will set aside the matiness Thursday and Friday espec-ially for ladies, and they are requested to prepare their questions at home and the history of the church, and in order to bring them to the theater. Tatum will give the local members of this denominated them without seeing them. On the bring them to the theater. Tatum will read them without seeing them. The Star's New Attraction.

Today's matinee will introduce the Star's new attractions for the week's run. The theater has been doing a record business, and in response to big patronage the management offers a bill of excep-tional merit. A special set of scenery is carried for which the Star's stage had to be enlarged. Melthe Star's stage had to be enlarged, Mei-ville and Azelle will furnish the bulk of the comedy on the bill in a clever little sketch called "Jack the Hugger," and together with Walter Perry, a monolo-guist, who comes with splendid recommendations as an entertainer, the humor ous part of the program will receive due attention. Yarick and Lalonda are character artists who have good singing voices and costume themselves very taste-fully. Boy McBrain offers a special number in "Leave Her Picture Hanging on the Wail," a pretty song and beautiful pictures. "Foxy Grandpa" is the Staroscope's number and is designed to please young and old. The bill is excep-
