CORPS FROM AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE TO CONDUCT THEM.

Five Points to Be Visited, Beginning at Grant's Pass, September 9.

GRANT'S PASS, Or., Sept. 2.-(Special.) -Dr. James Withycombe, director of the State Agricultural College, has arranged to hold five farmers' institutes during this month in the Rogue River Valley. The places and dates will be:

Dr. Withycombe and the other members of the college station staff, who will be with him, to have a full day in Jackson County and a full day in Josephine County to enable them to make a thorough examination of the various soils, crops and methods of cultivation that are will arrive in Grant's Pass the day previ ous to holding the institute in this city and they will be the guests of the business men and will be taken for a drive

Dr. James Withycombe, who will take up irrigation, dry-land farming and soiling: professor F. L. Kent, who will have dulrying grasses and cows; Professor A. B. Cordiey, fungus and insect pests of the orchard and farm. Hon. A. H. Carson, commissioner for the first district on the State Board of Horticulture, will discuss problems confroting the horticultural industry in Southern Oregon: Hon. H. Von der Hellen, chairman of the committee on agriculture in the late Oregon Legislature, and who worked for the passage of the famers' institute bill, will speak on the economical value to the agricultural communities and to the towns of the farmers' institute. H. E. Lounsbury, traveling freight agent for the betterment of farm methods.

It was planned to have Colonel R. C. Judson, of the O. R. & N. Co's experimental farm bureau, address the institutes on the methods of dry-land culti-vation that he has introduced to the farmers of Eastern Oregon, and which have enabled them to grow crops on land before considered too dry for farm purposes. Owing to a severe attack of rheumatism Colonel Judson will be un-able to take part in the programme of the meetings.

No section of the West stands more in heed of instruction in the new methods of dry-land cultivation than does Southern Oregon. This section is in the semi-arid belt and while crops can be grown by silpshod methods and by the methods in vogue in wet sections of the country, yet the productive capacity of Rogue Filver Valley could be doubled if but all the farmers here would drop the methods they used in the States and take up the new way of planting and cultivating that has proven so successful in other semi-arid districts of the West. This topic of dry-land cultivation will be made one of the leading features of the farmers' insti-tutes that Dr. Withycombe will conduct in Southern Oregon.

stitutes will be well attended, for both the farmers and the business men are taking an active interest in promoting the agricultural interests of this section of
