HOP BEARS PLAN GREAT STAMPEDE

Shorts Hope to Create a Selling Panic Among the Oregon Growers.

EXPECT TO BREAK MARKET

General Early Selling That Would Cover Demolishing of Prices Would Enable Them to Cover Their Stakes.

The greatest demand in the world of hops is in England, where it is not unusual to sell hops at the rate of 300,000 pounds a week during the growing season. At the present rate of production the country will have to take in excess of 400,000 pounds a week.

The Oregon growers are fearful that the English will not be able to meet the demand and that the price of hops will be bid up to a point where it will be impossible for them to make a profit.

The growers are now offering their hops at the rate of 50 cents a pound, but they are afraid that if the English do not come to Oregon they will have to sell their hops at a loss.

The growers are also afraid that the English will not be able to meet the demand and that the price of hops will be bid up to a point where it will be impossible for them to make a profit.

The growers are now offering their hops at the rate of 50 cents a pound, but they are afraid that if the English do not come to Oregon they will have to sell their hops at a loss.