Interest continues unabated in the Lewis and Clark stock exhibition and yesterday developed another surprise in the matter of attendance. There were more people at the show during the day than on Wednesday, the total attendance being estimated at 17,000. Street-cars and boats were filled on every trip leading toward the showgrounds.

People loiter for hours in barns admiring the magnificent dumb creatures who look smart enough to speak. They do not come for a brief space like the crowds at a pantomime. They are there all day. The trail leading to the show was a living thread of human beings through all of yesterday and they were all going one direction up to the hour for closing or for supper. Boats filled to their capacity transported people, too indolent or too busy to walk, from the Fair to the stock-show but the same boats returned empty until well along toward evening. Every class and condition of persons were represented in the gathering.

Progress With Awards.

Considerable progress was made in the making of awards. Fewer animals, however, were judged than upon the previous day, for a number of herds were brought out for inspection and it takes more time to complete this work. While the judges were at work their movements were followed with the keenest interest by a crowded grandstand. The placing of ribbons on some fine animal would occasionally bring forth a lively round of applause.

Stockmen continue enthusiastic over the exhibition, declaring it surpasses their fondest expectations. Veterans of the various exhibitions of the past decade say it compares well with the greatest shows of the country and is far ahead of any stock exhibition ever held in the West. The success of the show is bringing in stockmen on every train who would not have troubled themselves to visit a mediocre affair.

Will Continue Making Awards.

The various judges will continue their work today. Much of today's awarding in cattle will be in herds. Champions and grand champions will be selected in the various breeds of horses. Accordingly more than usual interest centers in the proceedings. The judges will commence their work this morning at 10 o'clock and continue with it through the day, with a brief interval for luncheon.

As on the first day of the judging, Oregon men shared conspicuously in the list of the prizewinners yesterday. For the first time in history, hogs from the Pacific Coast yesterday had a chance of displaying their relative merits against the corn-fed breeds from the Middle West, and that the comparison was decidedly to the advantage of those from this Coast is shown by the fact that fully 90 per cent of the prizes were landed here.

Some of the choicest varieties of swine were brought out from Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas and other well-known corn districts which have always been supposed to hold the palm in displays of this sort, but developments proved that they were no match for the stubble-fed and diversified farming product of the Pacific Coast.

The Oregon Livestock Breeders' Association will banquet the visiting breeders at 8 o'clock this evening at the American Inn.

SCENE IN THE JUDGING RING AT THE GREAT LIVESTOCK SHOW.

CATTLE JUDGING IS FINISHED

Frakes' Great Victory in Holstein Class—Large Herds Carry Off Prizes in Shorthorns—Stock Show Merits High Praise.

THERE was not such a crowd yesterday to see the finale of the cattle-judging. But the grou of families dealt with were full of interest. The family likenesses came out very strongly, and also in some cases a family was penalized by some weak member. After the judging was concluded, so far as the Shorthorns was concerned, one of the judges made a pleasant little speech of acknowledgment to exhibitors and their herdmen for uniform courtesy and compliance with requests. The hearty response showed that, although there might be soreness here and there when some favorite had not carried off the blue ribbon, yet there was no serious dissatisfaction with the awards. Going round the stalls afterwards and taking count of the prizewinners and their neighbors less fortunate, one deduction was plain.

In raising thoroughbred stock of all classes it is only the best that pays, and then only when it is made a business. Hardly ever is there a solitary prizewinner. The ribbons go to the large exhibits. So there is small temptation for any but wealthy people to enter the lists. Then does it not pay to raise thoroughbreds? Unquestionably it does, for excellence in blood stands for results in pocket. Therefore the sale, of which announcement is made, to take place today, in the show ring, should be taken fullest advantage of to disperse these blooded animals far and wide.

To every rule there are exceptions.

Frakes' Great Victory.

The man who exhibited 14 animals in the Holstein class and won 13 prizes, including the championship for cows, over the celebrated herd of John B. Irwin, of Minneapolis (who carried off the first honors at St. Louis), is such an exception. Chatting with Mr. Frakes, of Scappoose, Oregon, who is the lucky man in question, I found one who, for 17 years, had been following his ideal in Holstein cattle, not with an eye to the show ring and blue ribbons, but because the more highly-bred the animal the more money came back to the owner through the milk-pail. The champion cow was not only a beauty to look at, but a most profitable investment for the daily work of the dairy. Her proud owner pointed out the contribution of every item in the animals frame and constitution, of the gentleness of character, of the sturdiness and good health which demanded no extra care or exceptional feed, to the one great end of filling the pail, not with the milk of early days, thin and poor, but with the rich butter-making, cream-yielding milk which that cow produces in such abundance.

Such a talk to a class of students, with the illustration of success and the means that achieved it, would have gone home to many a one. But it would have had to be enforced by knowledge of the years of hard work, perseverance and far-sightedness which culminated in that row of Holstein cattle of all ages, with 13 prizes out of 14 exhibits.

Large Herds Score Too.

But in the three great classes of Shorthorns, Herefords and Jerseys, the honors fall to the large herds, and to exhibitors whose eye is ever directed to judges' awards and ribbons and prizes. Two of the smaller classes, Ayrshires and Brown Swiss, are confined practically to one exhibitor in each. The Brown Swiss filled quite a row of stalls, but were all but two owned by one man, J. M. Jayne, of North Yakima, Wash. These cattle I have never seen in Oregon, and in Washington only in the Swiss dairies in the Trout Lake country at the foot of Mount Adams, where the real Swiss cheese is the staple product. The cattle are of the mouse-gray and dark clouded colors. Medium in size, kindly in disposition, hardy and good milkers. Their milk is excellently adapted for cheese-making, but not rich in butter fat measured by a Jersey standard. When asked if there was a good market for the young stock the owner said that he could sell all he could raise to the Swiss settlers engaged in cheese-making in Washington. The Trout Lake Swiss decorated their cows with bells, graded in tone, imported from the home land, to add to the home feeling of the snow mountain, and the lakes and streams.

Fine Points of Ayrshires.

The Ayrshires, 17 in number, are all exhibited by Mrs. William Honeyman, of this city. If anything can induce others to invest in these cattle, it will be the sight of this show of them. The Ayrshires, small in size, as pretty as Jerseys, but hardier and more easily kept, are excellent milkers, and specially adapted to the one family cow owner. They will live on a small fenced lot of ground, or will take care of themselves on a hillside.

Professor French, of the Idaho University, is here with two graded steers, ready for the butcher at a very early age. One bears a label that it has gained in weight 2.77 pounds for each day that it has lived. I asked the Professor where his milking strain of Durhams was. For at the Idaho University Professor French is demonstrating a double purpose Shorthorn, originating in England from a well-bred Shorthorn strain of good milkers, which has been kept pure and bred by careful selection to growing results as milkers. He said that the cattle in question had not been made ready to show and had to stay at home.

I close this notice by repeating that it is a great gathering from many states, and collected from great distances. The Missouri, Indiana, Ohio and Minnesota people knew what they were doing when they brought their stock so far, for they take back many distributed honors among them. All these exhibitors have kindly words to say for their Pacific Coast rivals, and know them for what they are, "worthy of their steel."

Tomorrow I hope to discuss some sheep and goats.

SMALL BLAZE AT EXPOSITION

"Klondyke" Concession's Moving Pictures Go Up In Smoke.

Misfortune seems to follow close at the heels of the Klondyke, the Trail concession that was attached last week. It suffered a loss last night about 6:30 o'clock of $300 by fire. Several rolls of films of the moving picture machine became ignited from a spark, and in a few seconds were totally destroyed. The flames spread to the ceiling of the auditorium, and a big fire was only prevented by the timely action of G. E. Ames, the proprietor, who extinguished the blaze with a small hose. The fire was out by the time the fire department arrived on the scene.

Vancouver Will Entertain.

Vancouver will be the entertaining city at the Washington building at the Lewis and Clark Exposition next week. Mrs. J. R. Smith will be the official hostess, and she has arranged a programme for every day of the week. On Tuesday there will be a general reception; Wednesday, state day; Thursday, Alaska day; Friday, prune day; Saturday, participation in Portland day. On Tuesday Professor W. H. Boyer will furnish the musical features and on Wednesday and Thursday the Administration Band will be in attendance.

Great auction sale of blooded cattle will take place at the Lewis and Clark stock show promptly at 1 o'clock today. The sale will consist of Shorthorns and Herefords.

PUSH PORTLAND DAY

Work in Progress to Bring the Attendance to 100,000.

OTHER CITIES TO TAKE PART

Many Towns Expected to Send Floats and Bands — Local Wholesale Grocers Who Will Close Their Establishments.

ADMISSIONS, 24,452.
The admissions to the Fair yesterday were reported as 24,452.

"A hundred thousand for Portland day," the popular slogan at the Lewis and Clark Exposition, is rapidly affecting all classes of people in the city and throughout the state. The 100,000 attendance for Portland day is not the exaggerated prediction of some over-zealous Exposition official, but is based on conservative estimates that the admissions will reach this figure provided the weather is favorable. Portland day is to be "the" event of the Exposition and will surpass all other celebrations.

Not only will the whole of Portland turn out to the Lewis and Clark Exposition on September 30, but the attendance from all parts of Oregon, and Washington, California and Idaho, is expected to be with out precedent. There will probably be more strangers in the city on Portland day than at any time since the Exposition opened.

Seeking Co-Operation.

The management is systematically engaged in boosting Portland day at the Fair in all parts of the Pacific Coast. Representatives are now in California, Washington and Idaho arousing enthusiasm with a view to inducing a large attendance. They are also making a determined effort to secure the co-operation of other cities in making Portland day an overwhelming success.

Within the next week the mayors of every important city in the Northwest and California will be visited by these representatives, who will invite them to take an active part on Portland day. One of the feature's of the day's celebration will be a mammoth parade, second not even to that of opening day, for which it is hoped the Pacific Coast cities will furnish beautiful floats. Wherever the representatives of the Exposition have been on their exploitation trips, the proposed participation of the other cities has been heartily approved. Several of the cities are already making arrangements to construct floats for this occasion. Besides the many floats and bands, several military bodies will march in the parade.

Cut Out the "Dead-Heads."

The free admissions will be reduced to minimum on Portland day. In order to swell the cash receipts and make a creditable showing, practically all the people employed at the Exposition will purchase admission tickets. This has been done at all other expositions when the home city had its special day, and there will be but very few of the pass holders who will refuse to purchase tickets. Commissioners J. A. Filcher and Frank Wiggins have announced their intention of purchasing tickets of admission for all of the attendants of the California building on that day. It is thought all other state commissions will do the same.

The wholesale grocers of Portland have passed a resolution which states their belief that September 30 should be a memorable one in the affairs of the Exposition, and that a sense of civic pride should induce every citizen, not only of Portland, but of the whole State of Oregon, to join in the celebration. The wholesale grocers who have sent word to the Exposition management that they will be closed the whole of Portland day are Allen & Lewis, Wadhams & Co., Wadhams & Kerr Bros., Mason, Ehrman & Co. and Lang & Co.

COMMERCIAL CLUB IS BOOSTING

Will Do All in Its Power for Success of Portland Day.

This forenoon at 11:30 o'clock, a meeting will be held at the Portland Commercial Club of a special committee of ten members, appointed by President H. M. Cake, to devise ways and means by which enthusiastic observance of Portland day by people of the city, as well as the throng of visitors assured by favorable railroad rates to make it not only an occasion memorable in the history of the Exposition but a record-breaking event that will serve as an example of the loyalty and patriotism of the people to their great achievement of the most beautiful Exposition of the country.

"In view of the fact that railroad rates permit outside people to come to the city the day before and remain several days after September 30," said President Cake, "it is our hope that an understanding may be arrived at whereby merchants who have already decided to keep their places of business open on that day will reconsider and close to allow employes to spend the day at the Exposition. It will be of tremendous value to Portland if the report goes broadcast on that night that 100,000 or 110,000 people passed through the turnstiles of the Lewis and Clark Exposition Portland day. All the population of the town should be harmonized to make the occasion memorable and since the Exposition is a public institution our interests are all equal in making it successful. It is a duty to show the right spirit of patriotism to the large number of outside visitors who will be guests of the city a week from Saturday."

Members of the special committee of the Commercial Club are: Henry E. McCraken, Hugh McGuire, H. L. Chapin, Leo Friede, Sig. Sichel, William Gadsby, L. J. Wentworth and R. D. Inman.
