Aged Bill Collector McDonald Pleads Against Fate.

LIVED ALONE IN A TENT

Judge Cameron Mercifully Accepts the Old Indian Fighter's Promise to Find a Room, and Discharges Him.

Tottering under the weight of more than 80 years, James McDonald, familiarly known throughout the length and breadth of Oregon as the "Bad Bill Col-lector," stood before Municipal Judge Cameron yesterday morning and begged that he be not sent to the County Poor Slouse. The aged defendant, arrested by Policeman Burke for blockading a por-tion of East Madison street, said he meant no harm and did not realize that by setting up what few household articles he possessed on the ungraded thoroughfare he was injuring any one.

In truth, old McDonald had injured no one save himself by being there, but the police and court officials took pity on him and wished to have him brought in, so that he might be sent to the county house and be cared for. But the old In-dian fighter—for McDonaid was such in the early history of Oregon—could not bear to think of becoming a public charge, and he pleaded with Judge Cameron not to send him to the poor house.

"I will move from the place where the policeman found me, and will get rooms with some family," he promised. "I have money coming to me, but have not yet collected it. I don't want to be a pauper,

I hate to see you go there, too," said Judge Cameron, "but you can't tent dur-ing this Winter and live alone there; you must have some one to take care of you." "What you say, Judge, is good advice, I know," replied McDonald, "but don't send me to the poor house; I'll get rooms where I'll be comfortable."

County Health Officer Evans took charge of McDonald for a short time only, for the old man would not consent to go to the county house. He returned and told Judge Cameron that some meney had been collected for him, and that he would get some new clothing and rooms where he would be all right. Judge Cameron did not have the heart to send the id man to the poor house, so he is still at large on his own responsibility.

For half a century, McDonald has been a familiar figure in Oregon, and especially in Portland, where he has made scores of enemies by his persistent efforts in the collection of bad bills. He has lived in squalor, alone and uncared-for, and his health is broken. He says he lost property during the Indian Wars long ago, and has claims pending with the Government because of wounds received and services rendered during the perilous times when the savages thirsted for the blood of the pale faces then arriving in the Oregon country.

Judge Cameron "handed a package" to Grant Chesterfield, palmist, yesterday morning that he will not soon forget. On a charge of assault and battery upon Mrs. Sophia Marco, the fine of $50 was Imposed. On a charge of being drunk, $10 was the fine.

Chesterfield sets up great claims as a palmist, advertising himself as one who can tell the past, present and future, give advice to any one on any subject, tell where gold mines are located and whom marry, but the advice given him by Judge Cameron was stronger, perhaps, than any ever given by Chesterfield.

Chesterfield has apartments at the But-ler Hotel, kept by Mrs. Marco. While on an and beat her. This he has done before, according to her undisputed testimony. Only a charge of drunkenness had been filed when the case was called, but when the assault developed, Judge Cameron asked that another charge be

The cases against the proprietor and bartender of the Elk Saloon, Third and Yambill, who were arrested in a raid at an early hour yesterday morning with members of a burlesque company, will be heard this morning. Al Brown, alleged to have been running a little poker game in the Waiters' Club, on Sixth street, was fined $5, and eight men who were caught in the place with him when the police raided it two weeks ngo, were fined $2.50 each.

"Duke" Evans, charged by the police with living from the improper earnings of his wife, was discharged, as Judge Cameron found the evidence did not support the complaint. A similar charge against C. A. Wood, whose wife is said to be dying, was dismissed for the same

A charge of larcen- against Lee Gew, a Chinese woman, was dismissed upon motion of Deputy District Attorney Adams, as Governor Pardee, of California, refused to grant extradition papers. It was alleged the woman stole $300 from San Francisco people and fled to Portland.

Sayd Rajah was fined $10 for assaulting Nicholas Abdelnour on the Streets of Calro, an attraction on the Trail, at the Lewis and Clark Exposition, the previous evening. The trouble originated, it is said, over a woman. It was thought by the officials at the time to be a pretty serious matter, but Chief of Detectives Donahae appeared before Judge Cameron and recommended a low fine. Bail of $100 had been put up, and $90 was refunded by Clerk Hennessey.

D'URBANO NEED NOT PAY

Casciato's Suit Against Italian Bandmaster Is Dismissed.

Lewis D'Urbano, who has received the plaudits of some for his abilities as a bandmaster and the smiles of others for his antics in coaxing music out of his followers by frenzied motions and sooth-ing words, was made defendant in an action in Justice Reld's court yesterday for a board bill of $25.50, a suit of clothes, $31.35, and a quantity of sheet music $55. The plaintiffs were Nicola Casciato and Donato Rognone, saloonkeepers in the South End, who at one time were the "angels" of the Portland Italian Band, and who desired to blossom forth as musical directors as well as purveyors of refreshments. Judge Reid found the de-fendant was not indebted to the plaintiffs and dismissed the case.

The trials of the band from its artistic debut to its present substantial following at the Oaks have been many. Cas-ciato has expended over $4000 on the 24 members who made up the aggregation in 1904. Casciato fed them at his own table. Casciato has bought the uniforms besprinkled with gold lace which covers the backs of the members. Casciato has bought the music which the band has played. Casciato has paid all the bills. But Judge Reid held that as Casciato on and with the hope of being the gain-r by large receipts, it was his own loss, nd that D'Urbano is in no way resposnble for the money expended on him or any of his followers. The defendant set forth that he and his

The defendant set forth that he and his fellow artists received no salary for their services and that Casciato has deigned only at odd times to advance sums of not more than 50 cents at a time to individuals of the aggregation. Crusts of bread, said D'Urbano, were sufficient to appease the appetite of the musician, but it had often been a struggle to procure even these.

Minnesota Lumbermen Preparing to Spend $500,000-Largest Sawmill in West_To Employ Five Hundred Men.

Within a year, and probably by next Spring the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company will begin the erection at St. Johns of the biggest sawmill on the Pacific Coast. It will be considerably larger than the Portland & Oregon mills, and in size and capacity will be equal to any mill in the world. It has been rumored that it will be the largest sawmill ever erected, but the members of the Weyerhaeuser syndicate, who have been in Portland in-specting the site at St. Johns, refused to deny or confirm this.

The members of the syndicate who have licans in the interior to attend the been here are Frederick Weyerhaeuser, reunion, replies were not requested. The biggest and most influential lumber Acceptances, however, are coming in man in the United States; his son, Rufrom many, and Mr. Baker announces dolph Weyerhaeuser; R. L. McCormick that the work of the committee in its and George S. Long, of Tacoma; O. H. endeavor to insure accommodations for Ingram and E. B. Ingram, of Wisconsin,

R. L. McCormick, of Tacoma, secretary of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company, authorized the statement that work of construction would start within a year. He could think of nothing that would interfere with the plans. Mr. McCormick said he did not think work could begin this Winter.

The Weyerhaeuser mill, when completed, will employ 500 men or more. It will cost not less than $500,000. Besides the sawmill itself, there will be planing mills and other shops necessary for the mill will probably run both night and day, and most of the lumber will be shipped to the Eastern markets. The Weyerhacuser people have large holdings in Oregon, but their most extensive timber lands are in Washington and Idaho. The logs will be towed to the St. Johns mill from all along the Columbia River. Part of them will be secured from the Washington side.

The syndicate has long contemplated large sawmill near Portland, and several months ago purchased the 110-acre tract below St. Johns with this end in view. Not until the recent visit of Frederick Weyerhaeuser, however, has a date been set. The man who will draw up the plans for the mill is expected to be in Portland within several months to look over the ground.
