MacLennan's head. The blow glanced, and MacLennan turned and raced down a corridor. At this point Eugene Stotts, an employe of Mr. MacLennan's paper, ran to the rescue of his employer and struck Kelly a blow, without inflicting any serious damage.

Mutual friends then intervened and the men were parted. Kelly said the next time he met Mr. MacLennan he would not waste any time in conversation, and that the effects would be more serious than the results of today's encounter.

After the trouble today, Mr. Kelly is said to have intimated that he had been looking for MacLennan for some time, but had not been able to find him. It is stated that Kelly said he would require and receive complete personal satisfaction before he was through with Mr. MacLennan.
