Deny Germans Hate England.

Deny Germans Hate England.

We regret the form in which certain papers in Germany, as well as in other countries on the Continent and in America, vented their feelings during the late war in South Africa but we assert these stacks were not the outcome of any deep-seated hatred, and that no ill-feeling now exists in Germany against England, except that created from time to time by what we feel to be a misrepresentation of German aims in the utterances of English journals of high standing.

We can state that none of us, though living in widely distant parts of Germany, and moving in different spheres of Germany and moving in different spheres of German society and of party life, ever heard an attack on England soundly discussed or approved by any man or section of the German public worth noticing. Neither have we met anybody in Germany who credited the government with any intention or plan to war with England.

The naval policy of the government, whether approved or resisted, is everywhere in Germany understood to be directed solely to provide what the government deems to be adequate protection for the growing mass of German shipping. Certainly it is not based on any purpose to enter a wanton contest at sea.

Ties That Bind Nations.

Ties That Bind Nations.

We wish to be on truly friendly tegms with England and with Englishmen, and this wish is general in Germany. Every cultivated German knows and venerates the ties which bind both nations. To no other modern country does German civilization owe so much as it does to England, from the time of Luther and Holbein to that of Handel and Goethe, has found in Germany a source of pure spiritual and artistic Inspiration.

We believe that on the continuance of this intimacy between both countries depens to a great extent the future and the fullness of European civilization. We therefore call on British men of science on Britain's artists and painters, as the guardians in England of this heritage, and on the British press, as the leader of British opinion and feeling, to discountenance this prejudice which automatically casts suspicion on every act of German policy, for we are sincerely convinced that, if only this fog of prejudice could be dispelled, no step which the German government is likely to take and no feelings which the German people may hurbor can ever rightly endanger the friend-ship between the two nations.

The document is signed by the rectors and leading professors of universities and academies and by other persons of great prominence. The covering letter is signed by 41 persons equally pro walks of life in Great Britain. It says: In welcoming this communication from Germany, our only regret is that any doubt should axist concerning the recognition in England of the essential solidarity of British and German civilization. We accept withou reserve, and with warm gratification, all the assurances of our German friends and colleagues. We beg them to believe that we and those for whom we may speak are no whit less annoyed and misrepresented than they themselves by the affected belligerency of some of our journals. For us, between England and Germany, there is no fromier to be defended. War between the two powers would be a world calamity for which no victory could compensate either nation, and we emphatically declare our belief that the levity with which certain journalists occasionally discuss such possibility is the measure of their profound ignorance of the real sentiments of the nation. The latter include 4392,500,000 for the liquidation of the ex-penses of the Russo-Japanese War, the repatriation of troops in the Far East and the reduction of the army to a peace footing. For the first time the total cost of the war, $1,650,000,000, is revealed. The budget statement does not dodge the prevailing conditions in Russia. It is pointed out specifically that the recelpts from nearly all sources have been scaled down, and, moreover, it is stated that, if the disorders in the interior do not cease, there may be some branches of te on which it will be impossible

The budget also deals frankly with the heavy drain on the gold reserve of the State Bank balances abroad, which have fallen $152,500,000 in the three months pre ceding January 1. During the last ten days of the year the gold reserve was reduced by $30,560,000 while the iss paper currency was increased by $20,000,-000. This state of things is the result of the war and of the troubles which followed. These troubles are of a temporary character, and it is fair to assume that they will be ameliorated in the near future. Periods of economic depression, history proves, are ordinarily followed by periods of activity and prosperity. Economic agitation multiplies the energy of the ablest and most enterprising elements of the nation, and arouses the laboring masses to persevere in this work, which will not fair to better the industrial situation of the country and likewise the finances of the state. The "Reds" of St. Petersburg are striving to force a conflict and repetition of the Moscow barricade of streets and other features of the rebellion there, but the authorities are ready to declare martial law at a moment's notice and scout the idea that anything would not go an inch beyond the Imperial manifesto on the question of transforming the National Assembly into a constituent assembly for the purpose of formulating a constitution, and will not tolerate any attempt to do so, which would make it a revolutionary assembly and subject to dissolution by the Emperor. The Novoe Vremya also claims that the Premier announced that the Emperor had not abrogated autocratic power, and could still, by an imperial manifesto, broaden, abridge and even abolish the rights granted to the people. Continuing, the paper quotes Premier Witte as saying that much is expected of the Manchurian army in the restoration of order in Russia.
