TRESTLE STANDS, BUT IS CROOKED .- The trestle across the ravine on Grand avenue between Stark and Oak streets, where a ill is being made by the Pacific Bridge Company, still stands, but is badly twist-ed by the settling of the bottom of the ravine under the weight of the material. So far the timber-drain, built on piles, seems to be standing the weight, but that part of the trestle just north of the cuivert is constantly settling. The big sewer under the north end of the fill is still uninjured, but must be looked after constantly. If the trestle can be kept up the embankment will be completed much earlier than it would should it be necessary to rebuild it even temporarily. Persons are constantly using the twisted trestle to cross the slough, notwithstanding the danger signs posted at either
