Fire Departments and Citizens From Forest Grove and Hillsboro Save the Other University Buildings After a Struggle.

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY, Forest Grove March II - (Special.) - Pacific University sustained a severe loss today in the total destruction by fire of Herrick Hall, the young women's dormitory and general boarding hall. The building was one of the finest upon the campus, and the loss is about $20,000, although the original cost was only $14,000. Of this amount, approximately one half the

The fire originated this morning soon after 11 o'clock, while most of the inmates were attending services in the various churches. The flames were dis-covered by the matron, Miss Olivia Haskell, who gave the alarm. not meet the same fate.

It is thought that the fire was caused by a defective flue, although it may have been kindled by falling sparks. The fames were first seen on the extreme east roof and appeared to have burned through from the inside. When once aftre, the wooden structure burned with furnace heat, the flames fanned by a driving east wind. Had the fire caught in one of the lower stories, nothing would have been saved from the building. As it was, most of the contents were safely re-

For the first half hour they held the flames in check while the town people and students, who had come from their homes and the churches, which had

The campus is absolutely without facilities for fighting fire, there being not a single hydrant upon the uni-versity grounds with which the hose company could make a connection. The nearest hydrant is outside the grounds, more than 1000 feet from the site of Her-rick Hall, necessitating the use of only one line of hose. For this reason the flames would gain good headway in one place while they were being checked in

Even with this drawback the structure might have been saved had it not been for the strong wind. Marsh Hall, Science Hall and the Academy building, which were in the direct path of the sparks and burning embers, 109 yards wert, were in great danger. Students patrolled the roofs with buckets of water, which the plercing wind converted into sheets of ce almost as soon as it was thrown or

MARION HAS CHOICE OF TWEN-TY-SIX FOR LEGISLATURE.

Contest for Nomination for Seat in National House Is Attracting Most Attention.

SALEM, Or., March 11 .- (Special.)-Political affairs in Marion County will assume a more lively aspect during the coming week, when it is thought all the legislative candidates will have filed their announcements and will begin their active campaigns. There are two Senators and five Representatives been dismissed at once, carried out the movable contents.

The work of the fire department was the Republican nominations for Senator to elect, and it is now apparent that there will be about six aspirants for and about 20 for Representative.

When all have filed, and the people know the list from which they must make their choice, there will be more interest manifested. At present few promises are being made, for the members of the party want to see the com-plete list before tying themselves up to any one in particular.

The Congressional contest keeps to the front, as it has from the start, and interest in that feature of the cam-paign shows no signs of abating. Judging by the attention the various co tests recoive, it would seem that the votets consider the Congressional office the most important they have to fill. Usually the Gubernatorial contest absorbs most attention but this year proves to be an exception to the general rule.
All the Congressional candidates have made a tour of the entire dis-trict, except that Hawley has not visited Coos and Curry Counties. Hawley has just completed a visit to Douglas and Benton and has gone to Coos for a week's canvass, Huston has been campaigning in Douglas and Lane during the past week and during his ab-sence Tooze has dropped over into that gentleman's own balliwick. Washington County, to make some speeches.

Neither Hawley nor Huston has been making very strenuous campaigns. Tooze, however, has been setting a warm pace and promises to do so in the future. He has employed a private secretary and a stenographer to look after his campaign at home and has It assisted the fown people, however, in keeping guard over the business district, which lies west of the campus and was threatened by flying sparks.

The much-desired treaty of peace be tween Marion County's three candi-dates for Scoretary of State has not materialized and it is apparent that all are determined to stay in till the finish. Gatch, Pearce and Wrightman have all toured the state, and each is confident of winning. Since there are three from this county, many voters refuse to line up for any one of them, for nearly every voter is a personal and political friend of more than one of them. The contest will therefore not be very warm in this county and the strife for votes will be conducted mostly in other parts of the state. F. W. Benson, of Douglas County, the other aspirant for the Secretaryship, is traveling over the state and has paid a visit to the home of his three oppo-

Ashamed to Show Himself in Senate. Platt Fast Falling.-Oregon Powerless in House_Burton's Struggle to Return.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, March 10.—Senator Chauncey M. Depew is making himself scarce about the Capitol these days. Where he is. what he is doing or what he intends to do, no one can ascertain. He showed up in the Senate for three or four days following the Christmas holidays and then disappeared. He was manifestly ill at ease when he appeared in public; though

But Burton was apparently so deeply involved in so gross a graft that the courts carnot even find their way clear to permit him to resume his seat for a single day. Since he was first indicted, Burton has itched to get back in the Senate: he has many times gone into the cloakrooms and giared through the glass doors toward his vacant seat; he resorted to a subterfuge in order to get his mileage this Winter, but he dares not go into the Senate, for he well knows that Senators stand ready to expel him if he has the effrontery to force himself in among his colleagues. he withdrew from the limelight and sought seclusion, nobody knows where. Before he went back to the Senate, Depew announced his intention of "resigning the 76-odd directorates in various companies and corporations in order that he might devote his entire time to his public duties as a Senator." Judging from his actions, he has not yet shuffled off the burdensome directorates for he is certainburdensome directorates for he is certainly not devoting his entire time to his work as a Senator.

Was Nonentity in Senate.

Though he has five more years to serve In the Senate, Depew can never regain his standing in that body. It is true he was never a great or an influential Sena-tor. Aside from the disclosures made in the insurance investigations, Depew was a failure in the Senate. His reputation had been made as a wit and an orator the Senate he displayed neither of these talents; he was identified with no Important legislation; he entered upon a hum-drum routine and that was all. The first time it was announced that Senator Depew would speak, the galleries and the Senate floor were crowded. But the speech was a dismal failure. It was not bright, it was not witty, it was not not bright, it was not witty, it was not entertaining. It was a plain, straightforward argument, not at all what the public had expected, and the public was disappointed. So was the Senate. Depew has spoken few times in the Senate; he has made no notable speech that will be remembered; he has fathered no importune legislation. tant legislation; he has never been iden-tified in the remotest way with the really important work of Congress. His record for seven years is a blank, and the State of New York has been the loser. It certainly got a gold brick when the Legisla-ture sent Depow to the Senate.

Platt Crippled and Failing.

In late years, Senator Platt has been little better than Depew. Though feeble of body and less active mentally than in his prime, Platt does attend the sessions; he does vote, and he does look after some matters of local interest to his state. He does this at a great personal physical sacrifice, for he is no longer able to walk alone. He is attended by one, sometimes two, strong men in going from his carriage to his seat; he is attended every time he leaves his desk; he cannot go about by himself. Yet he drives to the Capitol almost every day; he sits through a great portion of the sessions and wields a part of the power conferred upon him as a Senator. But he is manifestly incapable of serving his state as it should be served.

Oregon is entitled to two Congressmen, and has elected them, but both have fallen into the clutches of the law. The one remains at home awaiting a trial of his appeal; the other, though several times indicted, has come to Washington and daily attends the sessions of the House, but he accomplishes nothing for his constituents. Representative Hermann can do no more for Oregon in the House than Senator Depew can do for New York in the upper branch—not as much, in fact.

New York in the upper branch—not as much, in fact.

From the first day of his appearance in the House, Representative Hermann has stuck close to his desk; he has not mingled with other members; he has not participated in debates; he has not secured action on a single bill he has introduced; he has not even been permitted to fill postoffice vacancies in his own district. He has voted, and that is all, but no vote has ever been so close that he could decide one way or the other, so the net result of his labors has been—nil.

It is a lonesome, humiliating existence Hermang is leading in Washington. He is avoided not only by fellow-members but by the Senators from his own state Not once since he arrived in Washington has Hermann been consulted about a single matter of interest to Oregon; not once have the Senators asked him to look after local legislation, called on or conferred with him; they ignore him en-

IDAHO SUPREME COURT PASSES ON WRITS TODAY.

Lawyers Wonder Whether Motion to Strike Allegations in Federation Cases Will Be Sustained.

BY W. G. MACRAE. BOISE, Idaho, March 11.—(Staff corre-pondence.)—This has been a day of rest or nearly all concerned in the case of officials and members of the Western Federation of Miners. The attorneys have spent the day in speculating on the decision, which will be forthcoming to-morrow from the State Supreme Court, upon the motion to strike out the allegations in the writs of habeas corpus filed in behalf of Moyer, Pettibone and Haywood.

The motion to strike out the allegations of the defense goes at the very heart of the writs and should the decision go against the men under arrest there will be little need to continue the arguments. The case will go to the United States Supreme Court if the writs are denied. James H. Hawley spent a part of the day in preparing his answer to the writ filed in the District Court for the release of Vincent St. John. What this answer will set up is not known, but it is believed that it will be shown that the grand upy which will resume its deliberand upy which will resume its deliberand. grand jury, which will resume its delib-erations Tuesday, is investigating the evidence against this prisoner To spec-ulate upon the decisions in both cases is a good deal like taking a census of a lot of eggs before the period of incuba-tion has run, yet tonight it is pretty safe to say that the applications for all four prisoners will be denied.

Governor Gooding. James H. Hawley and Major McPariand all emphatically deny that Harry Orchard's confession or any part of it, has fallen into the hands of any newspaper. Only three copies of Orchard's and Adams' confessions are in existence. One is locked up in the State Treasury vaults in the Capl tot, another safety under lock and key in a safety deposit vault here, and the third is in possession of Major McParland and is constantly under guard.
