ELKINS SPEAKS IN SELF-VINDICATION

Wants the Rate Bill Made Stronger Instead of Weaker, He Says.

Disputes Tillman's Claim to Title Says Connections and Car Distribution Need Regulation. Invalid Points of Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 6 .- In making an effort today to get the Senate to agre-upon a date for taking a vote on the rail road rate bill, Tillman made the import ant statement that one week more probi hly would exhaust the general debate. Jie failed, however, to secure the consent of Aldrich, who said that he would not be willing to agree to vote on the bill ntil it was more nearly perfected than

During the day there were three speeches on the rate bill. The first of these was made by Elkins, who, while exing the oninion that the situation do mands tegislation, indicated many defects in the pending bill. Gamble followed in support of the bill, and Kean closed in op-position. Elkins was frequently interrupt-ed, and several spirited colloquies marked his remarks. No Senator being prepared to speak tomo Senate adjourned until Monday.

Shippers Cannot Afford to Suc. Commenting on these omissions, Eikine made reply to the contention that they could be covered by state legislation. He said:

In the State of Wast Virginia and nearly all the states there has been legislation on these subjects, but for many reasons the law is not invoked. Now, in the first place, a shipper, single-handed and alone, cannot afford to sue a great interestate railroad; in doing so he is bound to incur large expenditures, great delay and is sure to incur the bostlity of the great through line, which may work irreparable injury to his interests

He had, he said, introduced amend-He had, he said, introduced amendments overing these defects. "The most important of them." he said, "is the one providing that interstate lines shall make prompt connections with connecting branches or lateral lines and fair, just and reasonable pro-rating arrangements with them."

He then spoke of the great improbability that additions, trunk lines will

"The people must therefore, in the future, depend largely for the further development of the country and con-tinued increase in business of short lines of railroads reaching rich sec-tions." Hustrating his point by cit-ing the conditions in his own state, he then said:

Compel Lines to Connect.

In the State of West Virginia and other will not build them under present conditions, because of the difficulties in the way of getting switches and connections with the inter-state lines and, when they do get them, se-curing fair treatment. Men cannot afford to take this risk unless the law guarantees them protection, and the people look to Congress to provide this protection in the bill under con-

If there is not a provision in this bill compelling connections and fair treatment to short lines, the certain result will be that people who have made invest-ments in land will lose their money, fewer railroads will be built, and there will be less business and less development of the resources business and less development of the resources

He expressed the conviction that "there should be a definite provision in the bill denying the power to a Com-mission to fix rates between localities on divergent lines."

Unconstitutional on Two Points.

After considering the question of court review at some length, Elkins announced his conclusion in the following words;

There was a general discussion of the West Virginia Senator's amend-ment requiring a proper distribution of the cars of any given company, all agreeing that such an amendment would be difficult of enactment.

Who Is People's True Friend,

Tillman was among the Senators who participated in this controversy, During its progress, Elkins referred to the pending bill as Tillman's bill. Tillman carnestly disavowed responsibility for the measure and Elkins responded. "You have got it fastened on you with all the disgrace attached to an effort to secure a reasonable rate bill," and after he had enlarged somewhat upon his attitude, Elkins replied that Tillman had an undue idea of his responsibility to the public. He said that his antagonist acted as if he thought he carried the people in his vest pocket and he must take them out every morning to assure them of his continued

Elkins declared that he was not i Elkins declared that he was not in the least troubled over the matter of the potitions, but added that he did feel disposed to protest against Till-man's attitude as the only friend of the people. He wanted it understood that he too, was a friend of the people Elkins took occasion to say that he Elkins took occasion to say that he had meant merely as a jest his remark of an hour before that the handling of the rate bill was a disgrace to anyone

"I accept the apology," said Tillman, When Elkins had concluded, Gamble, of South Dakota, spoke in favor of the bill, predicting that a failure to legis-late would result in Government own-ership of the railroads.

Kean also spoke, declaring that Con-gress should not exceed the authority granted by the Constitution in dealing with the question of commerce between the states. He declared that the pending bill transcends this authority, in that it provides for regulation of commerce by the Interstate Commerce

"Congress prescribes nothing, orders nothing," he said, "It delegates its own authority and, as this is not authorized, the attempt necessarily willbe futile.

Tillman made another ineffectual effort to secure an agreement upon a time for taking a vote on the bill. He said that, so far as he had been able to learn, the set speeches would be ex-hausted by the end of next weeks Aldrich objected, saying that it was necessary to consider amendments and expressed the hope that the measure would be so amended that he and Till-man might units in the support of it. nan might unite in the support of it, The following bills were passed:
