HOPE IS RENEWED

Langfitt Improves Prospects of Jetty Bill.

LOSS WOULD BE $1,000,000

Committee Misunderstood Major's Testimony, and Will Hear Him Again—Strongly Favors Appropriation.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, April 12.—Today's developments at the Capitol were such as to give renewed hope that Congress will pass the bill appropriating $600,000 for continuing work on the Columbia River jetty. Up to Tuesday it seemed certain that the bill would go through without encountering much opposition, but when it was reported that Major Langfitt in his testimony had stated that failure to make this appropriation would entail a loss of only $100,000, the situation took a decided change for the worse, and it began to look as though the bill would fail.

Langfitt's Opinion Misquoted.

Senator Fulton was at a loss to understand how Major Langfitt could arrive at any such conclusion, and today called on him to ascertain his views. The Major was greatly surprised to learn that the committee understood him to make any such statement, and said he had made no such declaration to any one. During his hearing before the committee, Major Langfitt did say that it would cost $100,000 to rebuild the jetty in case the present superstructure should be destroyed, but he specifically stated that the cost of the new jetty would be but a small part of the loss the Government would sustain in the event that Congress refuses to make an appropriation this session. While he makes no estimate of the exact loss, Major Langfitt told Mr. Fulton he believed the Government would lose close to $1,000,000, in case the present jetty should be destroyed before the jetty is completed.

Will Testify Again Today.

At Mr. Fulton's request, Major Langfitt went back with him to the Capitol, but was too late to appear before the river and harbor committee today. He did, however, talk with several members of the committee and made himself understood, and was assured that tomorrow he would be given another hearing, in order that he might submit his views more explicitly.

Major Langfitt will take with him a number of charts and drawings which he is having prepared, to demonstrate the present condition of the unfinished portion of the jetty, and to show the enormous amount of work that will have to be done over, in case the present jetty is destroyed before the jetty is completed. These charts will show about one mile of jetty half finished and illustrate roughly the amount of rockwork necessary to complete it. According to the drawings, the river bottom drops off sharply from the base of the present rockwork, and any new jetty that is built will be in much deeper water than the present jetty. As a consequence, if this mile of jetty has to be rebuilt along new lines parallel to the old, it will require much more rock than was used to bring the unfinished jetty up to its present height, it being impossible to make use of the rock now in place. Major Langfitt will endeavor to convince the committee that an immediate appropriation must be made or else one mile of unfinished jetty must be abandoned and be rebuilt at a cost which he believes will approximate $1,000,000.

Committee Favors Appropriation.

Those members of the committee to whom Major Langfitt talked today expressed opinions heartily in favor of making the appropriation, in view of the large saving that would be accomplished thereby, and Mr. Fulton now has strong hopes that the bill may be again set upon its feet and not only reported, but passed. The emergency, as pointed out by Major Langfitt, clearly places this project in a class by itself, and the committee adheres to its determination to accept no amendments.

Klamath Canal Purchase Closed.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, April 12.—The Secretary of the Interior has approved agreements between Henry E. Ankeny and wife, Roscoe E. Cantrell and wife and the Reclamation Service, whereby the former agree to the sale of the property of the Klamath Falls Irrigation Company, and also consent to substitute the United States for the company as to any obligations and conditions regarding their water rights. The United States agrees to give these parties the right to use water upon their own land from the irrigation system which the Government is constructing, subject to the obligation to pay the charges levied against such land for the management and operation of the irrigation system. Similar contracts have been approved with Russell A. Alford and wife and A. L. Leavitt and wife.

Accepts Site for Cleatun Dam.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, April 12.—The Secretary of the Interior today accepted the donation by Joseph B. Howson and wife, of North Yakima, of 120 acres of land on which the Government will erect a dam at the outlet of Lake Cleatun, which is to be utilized as a storage reservoir in connection with the Yakima irrigation project.

Life-Saving Bill Passes House.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, April 12.—The House today passed the bill recently passed by the Senate authorizing the construction of a $200,000 ocean-going life-saving tug for use on the North Pacific Coast. The bill also authorizes the establishment of a life-saving station at Neah Bay.

Moves for Spelling Reform.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The Board of Education yesterday adopted the following resolution without comment: "Resolved, That the board of trustees be and hereby is requested to investigate the suggestion of the simplified spelling board that certain shorter forms of words already authorized by good usage be used, and to report to the board of trustees whether in its judgment it would be advisable to permit teachers and pupils to use all or some of such authorized shorter forms specified in the simplified spelling board's announcement of March 2, 1906."

BARRED BY RIO CONGRESS

CAN'T ACT ON QUESTIONS VITAL TO MANY REPUBLICS.

Interstate Commerce on Rivers and Boundary Disputes Not Allowed on Programme.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Several of the Spanish-American republics are more interested in questions not contained in the programme for the Pan-American Congress at Rio next July than in the subjects agreed upon for discussion. Although the programme has been decided upon, it is likely that other questions will be laid before the Congress when it is convened.

The all-important question to many South American republics is the navigation of rivers passing through two or more republics. Disputes more-aggravated than those which have arisen over the boundary waters between the United States and Canada, have threatened the peace of South America repeatedly in recent years. Located as many of the republics are, the mountains to the westward form a barrier to their commerce, and the rivers are the chief avenues of trade. The Orinoco, Amazon and Plata rivers and their numerous tributaries form an inviting net of waterways for the products of parts of Colombia, Bolivia, Peru and Ecuador, but the conditions under which most of the streams are open to interstate commerce have discouraged shippers.

Brazil Objects to Action.

An attempt to include the regulation of interstate commerce in the Rio Janeiro programme had the support of several of the west coast republics, but Brazil was not willing, and discord was avoided by not pushing the matter. Colombia and Venezuela have had trouble for years over the navigation of the Orinoco and its tributaries, but this question is said to be one which will be satisfactorily settled through the treaty now pending between the two republics. As Venezuela is not a party to the Pan-American Congress and shows no indications of releasing an sending representatives, the action of that body could not affect the Orinoco River navigation, but the navigation of the many streams which traverse Brazil and Argentina was the subject which the Western powers hoped to have satisfactorily disposed of.

Old Boundary Disputes Barred.

Another subject of great moment was the wording of the section relating to arbitration. An attempt was made to have this section framed in such a way that arbitration might be extended to disputes in the past. If this had been done, Peru might have been able to carry to The Hague its old controversy with Chile concerning the Tacna and Arica Provinces, and many other celebrated boundary disputes might have been reopened. But great care was taken in wording the arbitration provision in such manner that it will not be retroactive. However, this is not satisfactory in its present form to many of the powers which are to participate in the congress, and an attempt to amend it is expected at Rio.

ROBBED IN HIS ROOM.

Racehorse Man Is the Victim of Bold Burglars.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 12.—Charles Carson, well known racing man, was called to the door of his room in the Ashworth Hotel early today by two well-dressed men. He noticed a third man standing in the hall. In an instant the two men who had knocked entered the room, placed black masks over their faces and producing revolvers, commanded Carson to hold up his hands. He tried to call for help, but was grasped by the throat and severely beaten on the head. Carson fell to the floor unconscious and was quickly robbed of $50 in cash, a watch worth $50 and some jewelry. The robbers made their escape before Carson fully recovered consciousness.
