ON TRIAL FOR LIFE

Slayer of Alice Gordon Self-Controlled.

HE SHOWS NO EMOTION

Wife, Whom He Abandoned for the Woman He Killed, Comes From Montana to Cheer and Assist Her Husband.

In a charge of murder in the first degree, for which the penalty upon conviction is death, George Blodgett, who shot and killed Alice Minthorn, otherwise known as Alice Gordon, was placed on trial yesterday in Judge George's court. The jury chosen to decide the fate of the accused is composed of the following citizens and taxpayers: Alfred Baker, Alfred Amund, F. P. Baumgartner, W. H. Chapin, Christ Malare, William Barrett, R. W. Gibb, John Sullivan, V. Blust, F. M. Ommack, E. E. Mink and Charles Siggett. Blodgett's wife, whom he abandoned together with her two children, has come here from Kallispell, Mont., to assist him, and was present in the courtroom yesterday during the proceedings. Although he abandoned her, she still clings to him, and for the sake of their children is trying to help him to the utmost of her ability. She left the little children at home, but carries with her their photograph. Blodgett seemed self-controlled throughout the day, which was consumed in the selection of a jury, and did not speak to his wife in the courtroom, but she visited him in the County Jail. She did not sit beside him, and instead occupied one of the spectators' seats in the rear. Charles F. Lord, in questioning jurors as to their qualifications to act, asked each if he indulged in social clubs and if he had any prejudice against the use of intoxicants. Those who opposed the use of intoxicating beverages were ex-

SUES TO CONDEMN LAND.

O. R. & N. Wants Ten Acres on the Peninsula.

The trial of the suit of the O. R. & N. Co. against Jacob Slaughterbach to condemn ten acres of land near St. Johns for the Portland-Troutdale line, was begun before Judge Cleveland and a jury yesterday. The jury was taken to visit the scene, so that it might be better able to judge of the value of the land. Mr. Slaughterbach asserts that his whole tract of land is good soil and desirable, and is worth altogether $10,000. The portion sought to be appropriated by the railroad he alleges is of the value of $3200. The building of the railroad he contends will shut him off from connection with the Columbia Slough road or boulevard. Francis I. McKenna, a real estate agent, who is familiar with values on the Peninsula, was called as a witness, and others will be called to testify who know the condition of the realty market in that locality. Arthur C. Spencer is conducting the case for the O. R. & N. Co., and J. C. Moreland is the attorney for Slaughterbach.

FIRST AND TAYLOR STREETS

front roadway on East Third street, from East Oak street to Hawthorne avenue. It must build sidetracks for manufacturing or mercantile establishments on East Third street between East Ash and East Mill streets. It must also arrange for switches, and there are provisions regulating the transfer to Southern Pacific or Northern Pacific tracks of carload lots. "As soon as Deputy Auditor Deutze has finished reading the proposed amendments, Whitely L. Bolas, who was present as an interested property-owner and who was evidently pleased with the turn of events, said: "I do not know who originated the amendments, but I can say as a property-owner that they would be a very happy solution of the problem." This remark was greeted with applause by the adherents of the East Side Belt Line Railway Company. W. D. Fenton, on behalf of the O. R. & N. Co., moved that the matter be laid over two weeks on account of the absence of General Manager J. P. O'Brien, and this action was taken. Upon Mr. Bolas's suggestion, provision will be made in the amendments for the return of the empty cars in each instance where this feature is overlooked in the measures. It was explained that the omnibuses, wherever they occur, were overights. Joseph M. Healy, Thomas McCusker, Judge George J. Cameron, John H. Burdard, William C. Puffer and others interposed in the entrance of the East Side Belt Line Railway Company's project, were highly pleased with the outlook, and Mr. Healy remarked after adjournment that all the amendments were acceptable, as they prevented East Third street from being bottled up, which was all they wanted. W. D. Fenton stated last night that the presentation of the amendments came as a surprise to him, as they were not expected the matter to come up yesterday, and were unprepared for any such move. For that reason he had requested the committee to grant him time in which to consider various phases of the situation. While not yet ready to express any decided opinion upon the subject, Mr. Fenton admitted that there was a fair prospect of the controversy between the rival aspirants reaching an amicable solution, and claimed that inasmuch as fully 95 per cent of the property-owners along East Third street was in favor of giving the O. R. & N. the franchise, it would be granted in some shape or other. Mr. Fenton seemed confident that the company he represents would not only secure the right to operate on East Third street under suitable terms, but would also build up the greatest warehouse district of the Northwest in that section.
