ELKINS GIVES GOLD BRICK

Amendment Regarding Coal Mines Will Not Attain Purpose.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, May 24.—Regardiess of what is ultimately done with the Elkins amendment to the Hepburn railroad rate bill, Cengress will be called upon in the near future to give further consideration to the problem of railroad control and operation of coal mines, and within the next year or two further legis-lation is looked for. The Elkins amendment adopted by the Senate provides that after May, 1908, "it shall be un-lawful for any common carrier to transport from any state or territory to any other state or territory or to any foreign country any articles or commodity manufactured, mined or produced by it under its authority, or which it may own in whole or in part, or in which it may have any interest, direct or indirect, except such arti-cles or commodities as may be neces-sary or used in the conduct of its business as a common carrier.

This amendment is unsatisfactory to a great many Senators and Representatives, because it will not cure the evils at which it is aimed and will accomplish results not desired. However, the amendment does not become operative for two years, and in the mean-time opportunity will be afforded for substituting more effective and more acceptable legislation that will tend, to a greater degree, to put an end to railroad control of the coal output of the country.

It was contended by geveral Senators that the question of railroad control of the coal output is as great a question as the regulation of railroad freight rates, and yet the two are not directly connected, and should not be dealt with in a single bill. Though the dealt with in a single bill. Inough the interstate commerce committee of the Senate devoted months to the regulation of railroad rates, it did not spend a single minute studying the railroad control of the coal output of the United States. That subject was ignored by the committee; it was not even brought forward by Chaleman Elkina.

forward by Chairman Elkins.

When the rate hill was reported to the Senate by Mr. Tiliman, the people of West Virginia set up a ciamor against Senator Elkins because he had ignored the coal phase of the railroad question. West Virginia does not suffer particularly from unjust rates unfer particularly from unjust rates, un-less it be on coal, and all of its troubles in that respect arise from the mact that in that respect arise from the mact that the railroads own or control the principal coal mines and absolutely control the coal market of the state. Mr. Elkins, who comes up for re-election before the next West Virginia Legislature, was quick to feel the pressure from home; he squirmed under the criticism that was hurled at him by Republican as well as Demogratio nawell. publican as well as Democratic news-papers and politicians and to mollfy the "dear people" he drow up and pre-sented his coal amendment to the rate hill Then the clamor subsided, for Mr. Elkins promised that his amendment would be adopted. The promise was fulfilled, but the fact is the West Virginja people have been gold-bricked, for the Elkins amendment will not bring the relief they expected; it leaves too many loopholes. But what is equalby bad the amendment unless altered, will do vast damage to the mining and lumbering interests of the West which have built hundreds of short roads in order to get their products to market. But in the meantime the West Virginia Legislature will meet: Mr. Elkins will "point with pride" to his amendment, which will not even be tested by that time, and it will be up to the Legisla-ture to take or reject the crafty senior Senator. "point with pride" to his amendment, which will not even be tested by that time, and it will be up to the Legislature to take or reject the crafty senior Senator.

The Eikins amendment, as a matter of fact, was inserted in the Hepburn bill simply to to save Eikins. Few Senators who voted for it have any confidence in it; Mr. Elkins himself does not believe it will be effective, but then something else can be substituted be-fore May, 1908, and that will probably

There is nothing in the Elkins amend-that will prohibit the officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad, for instance, organtaing a separate company which shall own or control the coal fields of Pennsylvania. The two companies would thus be separate and distinct would thus be separate and distinct corporations, though comprising the same officers. If this reorganization should be brought about, the coal situation in Pennsylvania would be unchanged in reality, for the officers of the railroad would naturally make terms that would be satisfactory to (themselves) the officers of the coal company, and the old order of things would be resumed. The Pennsylvania Railroad could still show favoritism for the coal mines owned by the new corporation, and the law would not be able to check it. The same would be true of West Virginia or any other state.

GUNS VERSUS ARMOR.

Expert Marksmen Wish Racking Effect Rather Than Penetration.

PORTLAND, May 25.—(To the Editor.)—With reference to the recent communication in The Oregonian as to high explosive shells at sea as against armor. I have just received a letter from an artillery officer in the East who is an authority on the question involved in the matter of guns and armor. He says: "Both the engineer board and the ordnance hourd are now in favor of the 16-inch gun. The whole argument has been reduced by our experiments at Sandy Hook with high explosive shells against armor, and by the naval battle between Rojestvansky and Togo in the Sea of Japan, to a question of racking rather than perforation. The racking effect increases very rapidly with the increase of shell capacity. The 16-inch shell holds 50 pounds more of explosive 'D' than the 14 inch. Its racking effect would be snormously greater on water-line and turnet armor."

This, you will perceive, is a great departure. It carries us back to the days of the great Rodman, who ever wanted his projectile energy to consist of mass more than velocity. So, it is not penetration they are after, any more. It is racking, and it is to resist that racking that they are building larger ships. Important matters now to know are: When the saip is built; where the work shall be done, and who gets the money for the Many Measures to Come Before the Senate.

CANAL BILL UP TODAY

Senate Will Consider Railroad Rates. Appointments and at Least Two Large Appropriation Bills During the Week.

WASHINGTON, May 27 .- The Senate is counting on a busy week and the prospect is favorable to long work days and few interruptions. After Monday there will be at least two appropriation bills ready for consideration, and the sea-level canal bill, having been made the unfinished busbill, having been made the unfinished bus-iness, will be pressed as steadily as cir-cumstances will permit. In addition, con-ferces will be appointed on the railroad rate bill; the nomination of Mr. Barnes to be Postmaster of the City of Washing-ton will receive attention, and the bill declaring a policy in the matter of the purchase of Panama Canal supplies will be considered.

The Senate manifests a disposition to devote serious consideration to the canal-type bill. When it is taken up, Senator Kittredge will present in a speech of considerable length the reasons which com-pelled the majority of the committee on nteroceanic canals to report in favor of the sea-level plan. It is now expected that he will speak Monday, and it is understood that his address will be the first of a series on the subject. On Tuesday Senator Millard, chairman of the canal committee, will present a report giving the views of the minority members in favor of a lock canal,

The general plan is to press the consideration of the appropriation bills as speedily as possible. The postoffice and naval bills will be ready for consideration early in the week, but it is not yet decided which will be given preference.
