force. He said in part: A compromise was effected upon the basis of instructing the delegates by plu-rality vote, but requiring a majority of the delegates to nominate. While the bill is not an ideal primary law, it will appear from reading it that much of the criticism to which it has been subjected is unfounded and that the bill is in fact a meritorious measure and will grow in the popular confidence as the people become familiar with its opera-tion. Congressional and Senatorial con-ventions. It was necessary to make the district the political unit, because, if the county were made the unit, Cook County would have to select, in county conven-tions, delegates to its ten Congressional districts and 19 Senatorial districts. This could not be, because the law would not permit voters to select delegates to any congressional or Senatorial convention except from those districts in which they lived. But, for conventience, it was pro-vided that the voters vote in election pre-cincts, the results to be certified so the County Clerk, who issues the credentials. It would have been laite to have the instructions bind longer, because so long as obsyed each ballot would have been a repetition of the first.
