San Francisco Recovers Her Spirits, Though Living Amid Ruins.

NEVER STOPPED BUSINESS

Ordered New Stocks Before Debris Was Cold-Prove Loyalty by Standing by Banks-Stand Disaster's Test.

BY ARNO DOSCH.
SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—(Special Correspondence.)-Life in what was the gayest city in America is attaining toward the normal once more. If the water were good, San Francisco would be today an attractive place to live in. People have always lived here mainly because they liked it, and they are remaining for the same reason. Let Chicago or New York have a similar catastrophe. and no one would remain who could not make money by so doing. Here the larger portion of the population is now living on savings bank accounts, and many have no immediate prospect of better employment than piling brick, yet they do not even consider the possibility of leaving the city. There are now over 200,000 persons resident in San Francisco, and at least 100,000 former San Franciscans coming to the city from surrounding towns each day, all of whom will return to live as soon as they can find a roof to cover them.

Begin to Enjoy Life.

These people are light of heart, the world is very beautiful to them and full of delights; even in distress they laughed at their plight, and, now that active resumption of business has begun and money is moving once more, they are beginning really to enjoy life once more. They take up every amusement that is offered them, and nothing will pay better than the high-class restaurants and the theaters, which are being rushed to completion in the unburned section of the city. At the Chutes, where the Orpheum has opened, there is not standing room to be had. Day and night all the cars are jammed with people going to one place or another. Everyone is always on the move, the same old San Francisco.

Rough and Ready Buildings.

This resourceful people has taken the short cut to regained prosperity. and is throwing up any kind of building in which to carry on business. Hundreds of one-story clapboard and corrugated fron buildings have been built in the last four weeks, some of them covering large tracts of ground. They are scattered through every portion of the burned district. I have been told that the large jobbers, both foreign and domestic, have carried on their business regardless of everything, and have only missed a few shipments. By so doing they have prevented a loss of business, which would land and Puget Sound cities. All freight consigned to San Francisco has been rushed through, and this facilitated the handling of business. The large business houses in consequence will be forced as rapidly as possible to build permanent quarters.

Manufacturers, printers and retailers have all placed orders for machinery and materials in the East, which will enable them to begin business shortly on as large a scale as formerly. When sufficient time has elapsed for these orders to be filled the city will again be in full swing. If those men had waited for the insurance adjusters to finish with them, they would probably never have had the courage to place their orders. As it is, they will have to pull out somehow, and they will.

Great Test of Loyalty.

It is well enough to talk about the fine spirit San Franciscans have shown, but their loyalty has been given its final test. and it has rung true. When the banks opened there was not even the semblance of a run upon them. Instead men went to their banks and deposited what little money they had, and have been drawing it out $5 at a time, as they have needed

For many meanwhile it has been a struggle to obtain the bare necessities of Most were too proud to remain longer on relief rations than they could help. Men have been given an opportunity result has been remarkable. Men who had never touched a tool have taught themselves to be good mechanics; clerks have become contractors, stenographers have turned cook, frivolous women have risen to the occasion and shown themselves to be good wives. But those unfortunates of limited capacity have found it hard. They could not "make good." Such has been the plight of many women cut off from their salary or income, generally with some one else to support. Many have even been forced to seek dishonor.

More Interesting Than Ever.

Taking everything into consideration San Francisco just now is more interest ing than ever before. The life of the city has been laid bare, and it has proved itself to be far better than its defamers have credited it with being. Moreover, there are big things going on. Sweeping movements, public and general, have been earthquake, and these have been growing in strength and taking varied forms as other. Even a month ago, when it looked as if San Francisco were gasping its last under the surface which are now coming to the top. The subtle change of events from day to day is fascinating to watch, and will be during the few years it takes to restore the city which took 50 to build

The Newspaper Reporter.

Rutland (Vt.) News.

The status of the newspaper reporter varies to a large degree with the locality. The reporter in his work, and the reporter individually, is steadily becoming a more important factor in the every-day life of any community where his services are required. It is perhaps in the amalier cities, the "country towns," that his persenality counts for the most, although in every place he is steadily and surely being lifted from practically the oblivion in which in years past public sentiment and lack of understanding of his work and value has placed him. The Montpeller Journal pays a beautiful tribute to a reporter well known throughout Vermont, W. A. Shay, who succumbed to pneumonia. The following excerpt is reproduced, inasmuch as it applies not only to the subject of the tribute, but in a general way is descriptive of not only to the subject of the tribute, but in a general way is descriptive of the life and work of many of his profession: 'His success was yours. He worked with vigor, not to furnish his quota of items for the paper, but to get all there was going of interest for the people to read. Enthusiasm in his work was one of his characteristics. You have seen him every day as he plodded on his daily round. He has greeted you at the railroad station, on the streets, in the stores and offices, and has made this world a little, yes, a good deal, brighter and happier for having lived. You have laughed at his wit over your teacups, you have seen the pathos which many times marked his writing, when his heart was the pathos which many times marked his writing, when his heart was touched. He has been a part of the city. He has known you through and through, has written the obituary notices of your friends, has rejoiced with you in your joy and sorrowed with you in your grief. Who can tell what an influence his writings which for yearshave passed down to the files have had? He has done his duty cheerfully, and has finished. His long-time familiar form on the streets will be seen no iar form on the streets will be seen no more. He has laid down his pencil."

PEACE IS HIS POLICY

Francis Joseph Receives the Austrians and Hungarians.

SPEECH TO THE DELEGATES

Friendly Relations With All the Foreign Powers and Alliance With Germany and Italy Has Been Renewed.

VIENNA, June 10.—Emperor Francis Joseph today received the members of the Austrian and Hungarian delegations in formal audience at the Hofburg. Re-plying to the addresses of the delegations, the Emperor, in a speech, thanked them for their loyal devotion. The foreign relations of Austria and Hungary, he de-clared, were entirely friendly. After an expression of deep indignation at the at-tempted assassination of King Alfonso and Queen Victoria, the Emperor con-visit Emperor William paid me a few days ago, our intimate and friendly rela-tions again were placed on record, and marked by the same feelings of trust as our relations with our ally, Italy, with which we find ourselves in gratifying ac-cord on matters affecting us in common." Referring to Russia and the Balkans, ie said that although the situation in the Balkans showed many defects, it was indoubtedly improved and that above all undoubtedly improved and that above all it had been found possible to avoid more serious complications. He expressed satisfaction that peace had been declared by Russia and Japan, "thanks to the unselfish mediation of President Roosevelt," and for the settlement at Algedras of the difficulty between Germany and France over Morocco, "to which our mediatory action contributed not the least part."

"As in the past," the Emperor continued, "the preservation of the peace of Europe and above all in the monarchy will continue in the future to be the dominant idea of our foreign policy in dealing with international affairs."

Emperor Francis Joseph announced Emperor Francis Joseph announced that credits would be submitted for the purchase of arms and war materials for the more speedy construction of warships and armament.

The reading of Emperor Francis Joseph's speech from the throne today was attended by exciting incidents. After listening to the speech the delegations proceeded with their respective sittings. Meanwhile the anti-Semite Burgomaster Lueger addressed an enormous meeting of clericals and anti-Semites outside the chamber of the Parliament building, invelghing against Hungary and denouncing Francis Kossuth, the Hungarian Minister of Commerce, as a traitor.

At the conclusion of the meeting a mob.

At the conclusion of the meeting a mob estimated by some to number 20,000, rushed to the Hungarian Ministry and there indulged for half an hour in demonstrations of such serious character as to impel the Austrian Minister to the unusual course of apologising to the Hungarian Ministers.

exonerated the Austrian Government or officials from any connivance in the demonstration and declined to take any formal action regarding it. The Hungarian delegation unanimously resolved to hoist the Hungarian and Croatian flags over the building during the sessions of the delegations.

Hungarian Delegation Insulted.

VIENNA, June 10.—Three thousand Christian Socialists, after a meeting in the City Hall this morning, made a dem-onstration against the Hungarian Minisgation was sitting, breaking the windows. The police had difficulty in dispersing the demonstrators. Baron von Beck, the Austrian Premier, immediately called in Dr. Wekerle, the Hungarian Premier, and Francis Kossuth, and expressed his deep regret at the demonstration, adding that he had ordered a searching investigation of the affair to be made with a view of punishing those guilty of participation in it. ing those guilty of participation in it.

Baron von Beck requested Dr. Wekerle

During the demonstration Dr. Werkie, the Hungarian Premier, and Herr Kossuth came to the windows, but were obliged to beat a speedy retreat, as their appearance redoubled the violence of the demonstrators. It is believed the real motive of the anti-Semitic leaders was less opposition to the Hungarian than to universal suffrage, which they say will strengthen the socialists in Parliament at their expense.

Not long ago Mr. Hitchcock was anxlous to see the prosecution through to the last indictment and the whole robber gang "cleaned up," to use a Western expression. His 70 years sat on him lightly when he thought of the good work that was being done and of how Uncle Sam was coming into his own again. It was the gang that was breaking up, not the constitution of sturdy old Ethan Allen Hitchcock.
