

HARRY THAW IS SAID TO BE SANE

Report of Alienists Who Have Unsatisfactory Interview With White's Slayer.

ALL QUESTIONS PARRIED

Pittsburg Millionaire Says His Nerves Are Unstrung and He Will Submit to Physical Examination Only by Force.

NEW YORK, June 27.—That Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, is perfectly sane was the report made today by the alienists retained by the District Attorney's office to examine into the prisoner's mental condition. This report was made after the physicians had spent an hour with Thaw, who, in defiance of the advice of his counsel, refused to answer any questions and declared that nothing short of actual force would compel him to submit to a physical examination.

When the committee of physicians called upon the prisoner, Thaw said firmly, as the first member was introduced to him by Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, retained for the defense: "I beg your pardon, I will answer no questions whatever."

They began a general conversation on trivial subjects with Dr. Austin Flint and Dr. Hamilton, Thaw deftly parrying any questions that had any bearing on his mental or physical condition. Finding him obdurate, the doctors hurriedly summoned Mr. Olcott, but to him Thaw vehemently reiterated his determination to answer no questions.

Says Nerves Are Unstrung. "You can put it down to the condition of my feelings, if you will," said Thaw.

"My nerves are unstrung; their tension is great. I will not be examined today."

Pressed for a clearer cause for his refusal, he said: "I have not any; I have none at all. Put it down to obstinacy if you wish."

He had promised Mr. Olcott before the examiners met to submit to the examination.

"This refusal will hurt you," Mr. Olcott is said to have pleaded.

Refuses to Be Examined. "I don't care. Nothing but absolute force will get me to allow myself to be examined or say anything today. I think I first ought to talk with Dr. Hamilton and then have a talk with Mr. Delafield. Later I will tell you whether I will talk with the commission or not." He was then taken back to his cell.

Mr. Olcott said later that he was unable to account for Thaw's refusal, and that he could only attribute it to unaccountable obstinacy. As his counsel, he said he had no objection to Thaw's answering any of the questions addressed to him by the physicians.

Visited by Mrs. Thaw. After the alienists had departed, Mrs. Thaw was permitted to see her husband for the first time since his arrest. She came to the Tombs in a carriage, accompanied by her husband's brother, Josiah Thaw. The meeting between husband and wife was affectionate, and they talked in an undertone. Thaw also received a visit from his sister, Mrs. George Carnegie, and Clifford W. Hartridge, of Pittsburg.

Before visiting the Tombs Mrs. Thaw had a long conference with Judge Olcott and Frederick Delafield, at which it is said the line of defense was discussed, and the intention to interpose a plea of insanity was confirmed.

Nearly Mobbed by Reporters. Mrs. Thaw remained with her husband about an hour. As she was passing through the corridor of the Tombs on her way to her cell, a crowd of newspaper men surged about her, but she motioned them away with a sweep of her arm.

"Please excuse me, please excuse me," she exclaimed, her eyes brimming with tears, as she pushed through the door into the crowd which surrounded the prison. Mrs. Thaw's brother-in-law was obliged to fight the crowd to make a passage across the sidewalk for her. As the cab drove away it was followed by the crowd until it dashed around the corner and disappeared.

The prisoner seemed little affected by the interview. He sat down to a hearty dinner immediately after his wife's departure.

When asked about the letters from White which Mrs. Thaw yesterday turned over to Mr. Delafield, Mr. Olcott said that he believed they were of material value to the defense. Further than this he declined to comment on the case.

Inquest Begins Today. Coroner Dooley announced today that the inquest, which opens tomorrow, would not be a formal proceeding to establish the cause of White's death, but that all available witnesses will be examined for the purpose of fixing the crime on Thaw, in order that he might be held for the action of the grand jury. Mrs. Thaw will not appear at the inquest, and it was said today that in all probability, she will not be required to appear before the grand jury, in which case her testimony will not be taken until the trial.

In the meantime the District Attorney's office will prosecute a most material investigation of the habits and movements of Thaw and White during a period of several weeks previous to the tragedy.

Thaw's Valet Is Questioned. No less than 20 witnesses were examined in connection with the case by the District Attorney's office today. Among the most prominent of these was Thaw's valet, William Bedford, who has been in his service for six years, and is believed to be conversant with the most prominent details of the case.

It was announced at the office of the District Attorney that Mr. Garvin, who is preparing the case against Thaw, today discovered a witness who alleged that he overheard White make derogatory remarks about the prisoner while in the Cafe Martin a few hours before he was shot. According to the witness, whose name is concealed for the present, he heard the remarks of White, who was seated two or three tables away, and evidently was not whispering. At that time Mr. and Mrs. Thaw were in the cafe dining.

It is believed that this witness will not appear before the coroner's jury, but that he will be reserved for the trial.

on excellent authority that Harry K. Thaw and Mrs. Thaw were also to be passengers on this boat. Owing to the statements of Mr. and Mrs. Thaw against White, the fact that they were all to be passengers on the same boat puzzles the police.

SURE HIS FRIEND IS INSANE Burr McIntosh Tells of Erratic Behavior of Thaw.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Burr McIntosh, for many years a friend of Harry Thaw, who was with him just before the shooting, is positive the man was insane. He says that only last Monday morning Thaw accused a person who was practically a stranger of paying attention to his wife and threatened to kill him.

"This man," said Mr. McIntosh, "was John A. Forgotson, a well-known real estate operator, who was standing in front of his place. Thaw approached him, although he knew him only slightly, and exclaimed: 'Are you still in love with my wife? If you are I'll kill you.' Mr. Forgotson was amazed, and then, seeing that Mr. Thaw was distraught, replied that he had not even the honor of Mrs. Thaw's acquaintance and had never seen her.

"I have known Mr. Thaw since boyhood, and I have noticed that in the last few years he has been erratic in his behavior. I have not the slightest doubt that he was insane when he committed the deed. Mr. Thaw was jealous of his wife. He was in love with her, and she seemed to be in love with him. Within the last few months he seemed to be possessed with a mania that everybody was making love to her."

Mr. Thaw was one made while she was on her way to the offices of her attorney yesterday. She said: "The incident of last night is too painful to discuss. I am not a fugitive from justice. I am here with my lawyer, and I shall not try to get away. I hope poor Harry will soon get out of his trouble. I did not think he would do it."

Jammed His Hat on His Head. NEW YORK, June 27.—Among the witnesses questioned yesterday by the police was the waiter who served the dinner to the Thaws at the Cafe Martin Monday evening. He declared that Mrs. Thaw was very quiet during the meal; that Thaw did not meet White at the restaurant, and that White's entrance did not cause any particular excitement, except that Mrs. Thaw was very pale. As to Thaw's conduct after the dinner the waiter said:

"When I handed him his hat he literally jerked it out of my hand, and in putting it on he crushed it down over his forehead and eyes with a crackling sound, which indicated that it had been broken by the violence of his treatment."

He said that he had seen Mrs. Thaw in the Tombs consultation-room.

MASTERY OF MODEL

(Continued From Page 1.) marked that he supposed Thaw had been accustomed to having a stimulant of some kind before retiring, and that he would miss it. He told the prisoner, however, that under the prison rules he could not be permitted to indulge in his habit.

Thaw admitted that the physician's surmise was correct, and he appeared grateful when the physician told him he had left two potions for him in case he should be restless during the night and unable to sleep. However, he was strongly urged not to call for them unless he felt himself unable to do without them.

This morning the medicine remained untouched, the prisoner having enjoyed a natural sleep. Seventeen letters were received in this until the alienists permitted Thaw to return to the prison. The arrival of Mrs. Thaw at the prison had been anticipated, and a crowd numbering several thousand pressed around the prison entrance when her cab arrived.

An Italian funeral cortege was passing down Center street, the brass band playing a funeral dirge, and Mrs. Thaw's cab was obliged to take its place in the long line of carriages behind the hearse. When the Tombs was reached the street was so crowded that it would have been impossible for her to alight, and a circuit of the square was made while a large force of policemen labored to clear a passageway from the street to the prison entrance for Mrs. Thaw.

Mrs. Thaw was obliged to wait about half an hour before word was brought to her that her husband had returned to his cell. Both she and her brother-in-law then were subjected to search, as is customary in the case of all visitors to the Tombs. Nothing was taken from Mrs. Thaw, but the attendants gave Josiah Thaw a numbered check in place of a small penknife which they found in his pocket. Mrs. Thaw and her brother-in-law were then conducted to Thaw's cell on the second tier. The prisoner and his wife greeted each other affectionately. "You don't look very pert," she said, as the attendants left them alone for a long talk.
