This permission was granted, and the prisoner was led away from the bar and taken back to his cell in the Tombs.

SWEENY MURDERS A MINER

Brother of Spokane Millionaire Also

LEWISTON, Idaho, June 29.—Advices reaching here this morning from Grangeville give meager details of a shooting scrape which occurred on Crooked River, five miles below Oro Grande mining camp, in the Elk mining district, in which M. R. Mitchell, a prospector, was shot and killed, and Mike Sweeny, a brother of Charles Sweeny, the millionaire mine-owner, of Spokane, was slightly wounded. The Sheriff and Coroner of Idaho County have gone to the scene of the tragedy. f the tragedy. It is understood that bad blood has existed between Sweeny and Mitcheli for two years past in a dispute over mining claims, and that Sweeny's arrival in the camp a few days ago precipitated a serilous quarrel. Mitchell was about 40 years old, and is known throughout this section as "Dod Joc." He had been in mining camps of this vicinity for ten years. Sweeny is also well known here and in Spokane through his identification with his brother in mining interests in Buffalo Hump and elsewhere. Sweeny was in this city several days ago and was accompanied to Oro Grande by Andrew Prader,

A DONKEY CURE.

Whooping Cough Victims Relieved When Doctors Fail.

New York Sun.

"My little girl here has the whooping cough and I want to have her cured" said a woman to Policeman Coyle near the elephant house in the Central Park menagerie yesterday.

"Why not take her to a doctor?" responded the policeman.

"I had a doctor, but she does not get better. The physician says the disease must run its course, but a neighbor told ma that her boy took the donkey cure here and advised me to try it. Where is the donkey pleane?" went on the woman. "In there, ma'am," said the policeman, pointing to the deerhouse.

A currous visitor who happened to overhear the colloquy made inquiries, and hear the celloquy made inquiries, and learned that there is a considerable num-ber of persons in the city who have faith in the donkey cure. They are not all unlettered persons either.

Their whims, if they may be called such, are always humored by the keepers, and they usually go away feeling happier. It is to increase the sum of human happiness that Father Knickerbocker maintains a collection of beasts and birds in the north park.

The curious visitor followed the woman and her child into the deerhouse to see what would happen. Keeper Phil Holmes had just finished feeding the animals and the woman spoke to him about her child. "The little darling is troubled so with the terrible cough that she gets black and blue in the face. I would do anything to get relief for her," said the woman. "You want to pass her under the jack-

"You want to pass her under the jack-ass, ch? To be sure, ma.am. I'll do it for the handsome little lady," said the keeper. The ani-mal strong quickly as though it know from maj stood quietly, as though it know from experience just what was required of it. Besides, a lump of sugar from the keeper is usually its reward, and it is very fond of sugar. The donkey cure must be performed in a particular way to be efficacious. At least, that is the accepted theory in Central Park. The patient is passed under the animal's belly three times from the right side to the left, and must return to the right side from the left each time over the animal's back. When the patient is a child the mother stands on the right side and passes the child under the beast to the keeper on the other side. He takes the child and passes it over the beast to "You'd be surprised how many people Toud be surprised how many people believe in this cure for whooping cough," Molmes said afterward. "I remember one day a child, its mother and its grand-mother came in here and asked to have the infant pass under the ass. The grandmother said that the child's mother had been cured of the cough in the war. had been cured of the cough in the men-agerie when she was a child. This the mother herself did not remember, but she believed what her own mother said and wanted to try it for her little child. Quite often women come into the building and tell me that their children had got better after going under the animal." The keeper was asked .. he knew on what theory women visitors based their bellef in the healing virtue of the singu-

His attention was attracted by the firing of a shot and he looked just as Creffeld sank in his tracks to the sidewalk. He ran across the street to the scene and heard Mrs Creffield ask the slayer why he had killed her husband. Mitchell made no reply.

Tuchten said he was particularly im pressed by the calm demeanor of the mar who did the shooting. Mitchell stood near the body, smoking a cigar, and showed no signs of emotion. Similar testimony was given by W. C. Capps, a dentist who has offices in the Washington block, near the scene of the shooting. He heard the fatal shot and saw the body lying on the sidewalk. Further testimony substantiating the facts of the killing and all of a similar nature, was given by John A. Whalley, an insurance agent, and Peter Wooley, a bootblack, at the fore-

The afternoon proceedings were taken up by Mrs. Creffield, the officers who arrested Mitchell and had him in custody, and a newspaper reporter who interviewed him shortly after the shooting. Patrolman LeCount, who made the apest, said Mitchell submitted quietly. He asked him why he killed the man and Mitchell, after putting him off, finally told him at the police staton, that Creffield ruined his sisters and was the leader of the Holy Rollers, a cult that was driving women out of their minds and robbing them of their chastity. Corroborative evidence was presented by Charles Tennant, sergeant of detectives; Police Captain Willard and by Louis B. Sefrit, a reporter for the Seattle Times.

The last witnesses of the day were Police Captain John Sullivan and H. P. Ford, who saw Mitchell send a telegram mmediately after the shooting, to Q. V. Hurt, Mrs. Creffield's father, at Corvallis. In this telegram he said: "I have got my man. Am in jail here." Mr. Milier then stated that the case for the State was before the jury and adjournment was taken until Monday at 9.30 o'clock.

this defendant was standing there and after they had passed fired a shot from his pistol, which entered the base of Creffield's brain, in the ball lodging in the right point of the jaw. His wife looked around and saw George Mitcheli with a smoking revolver in his hand.

She rushed to him and asked: "What did you kill my husband for? He never did you any harm." He never answered, but continued cooliy smoking his cigar.

Officer LeCount came up and found the defendant walking up and down, while Mrs. Creffield scuffled with him, pushing him away from her husband. Someone pointed him out as the man who had fired the shot, but in answer to the policeman's question he said: "Wait till I get to the police station and I'll make a statement."

When he got there he asked for a telegraph blank and sent this message to C. V. Hurt, Corvaliis, Oregon: "I've got my man. I am in jail here." That telegram, gentlemen, will be introduced in evidence.

To Louis Sefrit, a newspaper reporter, he said: "I came here Wednesday morning and had been looking for him. I saw them a block and a haif away, and when they passed me I jumped out and fired."
