LAST OBSTACLE

He Steps Aside When Bryan Wave Threatens to Engulf Him.

NEW PARTY BEING FORMED

Radical Leader Bides His Time and Combines Labor Vote and Battle When Bryan Is Out of the Race.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, July 12.—The announcement of William R. Hearst that he is not a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1908 is believed by well-posted political observers to make almost certain the nomination of William J. Bryan.
Nothing that has happened since the revival of the Bryan boom has done so much to aid Bryan as the withdrawal of Hearst.
Hearst was the one man in the Democratic party most likely to upset the plan of the Bryan wing of the Democracy, but now that he has withdrawn and speaks in a friendly way of Bryan, the course seems comparatively clear.
Hearst is probably shrewd enough to know that he is today less popular throughout the country than Bryan, although he is stronger politically now than ever before—stronger among the labor element. Sizing up the situation, he probably finds that defeat would overtake him if he should seek the nomination in 1908, defeat at the polls, if not in the convention, for he has found, as others have, a growing sentiment among Republicans in favor of the renomination of Roosevelt, and Hearst is wise enough to know that he could not beat Roosevelt. He has probably also concluded that he could not defeat Bryan in the next Democratic convention.

Organizing Labor Party.
All this while, however, Hearst is already working on his plan of organizing a new party, a labor party, which he hopes in time to array against the party of Roosevelt and of McKinley. The new party such as this cannot be formed in a year or in two years; it must develop gradually, and every move made by Hearst is in the direction of consolidating the labor vote, drawing first from the ranks of the Democracy. Hearst knows that he could not at this time make any material inroad on the Republican party, while Roosevelt is at the helm, for Roosevelt has shown himself to be a firm friend of labor, while Hearst has merely professed to be the friend of labor.
Hearst's dream is ultimately to disrupt the Democratic party and draw from the ranks the bulk of the voters under a labor standard. He is not going to spring the idea until he is reasonably sure he can make it work, and he certainly will not enter the field in 1908 as the candidate of a third party against Bryan and the nominees of the Republicans. To run in this way would mean certain defeat for both Hearst and Bryan, provided the Democrats nominate Bryan. It would make no difference whom the Republicans nominated under these conditions, for the Republican party would remain practically intact, while Hearst would lead one wing and Bryan the other wing of the disrupted Democracy, and each would work against the other.

His Time Comes After Bryan.
That is why Hearst has decided to bide his time. He realizes that the present is not the time to attempt the organization of a labor party, particularly while Bryan is in the field. Bryan is as good a friend of the laboring man as Hearst; he has made as glowing promises and as friendly protestations, and his following among that class is exceptionally large. Even Hearst could not wrest from him any considerable portion of this vote.

Hearst's time will come when Bryan is again put out of the way—after he has again been defeated, if such fate shall be in store for him, or at the close of his administration, if he should be elected. If Bryan is nominated and is defeated a third time, he cannot reasonably ask his party to again follow his leadership, and in that event Hearst will have a chance to point to the repeated failures of Bryan on all sorts of issues and under all sorts of conditions. A third defeat for Bryan would justify Hearst in declaring that the principles for which Bryan stands are not popular; that the party which he three times led to defeat needs reorganization, and then would be his opportunity to spring his labor party idea.

May Figure as Candid Critic.
Or, if Bryan should be elected, another opportunity would open up for Hearst. The Bryan administration could not possibly make good all its promises; it could not put in force all the reforms which were proposed by the party leader. There would be certain failures which could and would be attributed to Bryan. Bryan as President would not do all for labor that Hearst, through his newspapers, could demand. It would be for Hearst to criticize and find fault; to point out how much more might have been done had Bryan really made the effort. By harping away along these lines Hearst would ultimately shake the faith of many Democratic voters in the "peerless leader," and by the time Bryan's administration drew to a close its omissions as well as its manifest errors would afford abundant excuse for springing his reorganization idea.

Hearst made a wise move when he declared he would not be a candidate for the Democratic nomination in 1908. In the first place he probably could not get the nomination, for Bryan in the field. Moreover, conditions are not such that he could win on an opposing ticket. It will take years to work out the details of a close its omissions as well as its man-
excuse for springing his reorganization idea.

Helmeze Interests in Control.
SALT LAKE CITY, July 12.—At a special meeting of the executive committee of the directors of the Bingham Consolidated Copper Mining Company, held yesterday, Captain Duncan MacVehite was chosen as the managing director of the Bingham Consolidated properties and Harry L. Charles, of Butte, Mont., was chosen as general manager of the smelting and other works. Charles has been long employed by E. Augustus Helmeze in Montana, and his appointment is in recognition of the Helmeze interests in Bingham. The directors authorized the expenditure of $400,000 in building an addition to the Bingham smelter.

WHICH?

This store aims first to gather best possible news—of uncommon value, remarkable prettiness, or glistening newness—then to tell it in a newsy, bright, entertaining way. Occasionally we hear someone say, "Why don't you cut out all the 'editorial comment' and 'leads'?" In other words, serve up a solid roast beef dinner minus salt, pepper and sauce. It costs a little more to "spice" our advertising, but we believe the flavoring adds to the relish—RESULTS seem to prove it. Today, however, we're going to serve a grand bargain feast of figures; splendid merchandise at remarkable prices, but without "spice" or comment. Just the briefest, tersest bargain tale ever told. Reader—which way do you prefer the store story served, with, or without? WHICH?
