Some of the salmon packers on the Pacific Coast have taken up the matter of the misbranding of canned salmon, and their efforts are being seconded by brokers and jobbers in the East. It is stated that the misbranding is the direct result of the wide use of buyers labels. To such a point has the practice gone of labeling inferior grades of salmon as of higher quality that the interests of packers of the better class of goods are held to be seriously threatened. seriously threatened, and to remedy the evil ovement having for its object the con naugurated. It is further held that the confusion arising from the misbranding of salmon, as to quality and place of pucking is a serious detriment to the interest of the distributing trade. The New York Journal of Commerce quotes a leading jobber of that city on the subject as follows:

quotes a leading jobber of that dity on the subject as follows:

The new National pure-food law is very strict as to misbranding and buyers will have to stop relabeling saimon that has been caught and packed at other points "Columbia River chinook" or "Fancy sockeye," or misrepresenting in any way the contents of the can on which their label is placed. Coast reports received by us state that already some of this year's pack of Alaska red saimon has been branded as sockeye. This sort of thing works an injunitie to the whole saimon packing industry. If a consumer buys an inferior grade of fish, under a label which claims it to be first-quality chinook, he is very ant to stop eating salmon on the assumption that there is nothing really good canned under that name. Or, if he doesn't put salmon on his black list, he will be inclined to buy sparingly thereafter for fear of being fooled again. To the misbranding of Alaska salmon by the use of Sockeye labels can be traced a good deal of the weakness and slow distribution of that grade of fish in tall cans. In the English markets, where the discrimination as to texture and quality of the fish is not so pronounced as here, it has been the practice to relabel red Alaska talls, "Sockeye," and the consequence is that grantne sockeye talls have been carried over from year to year, and market prices have consequently ruled low.

The misbranding of salmon to my mind is much more of a trade lower than the profusion of private labels, and the sconer we can correct this abuse the better it will be for the jobber, as well as the packer.

was a liberal stock of all kinds of fruit on Front street yesterday. The demand was active, however, and the supply did not prove excessive. Two cars of mixed fruit om California were delivered in the morning and two more cars reached the railroad yards in the afternoon. Local shipments of deciduous fruits were also very heavy. Two cars of cantaloupes, one from Salt Lake and one from Exeter, were put on sale, also two fresh cars of watermelons. Oregon cantaloupes are arriving more freely, Profit-Taking on the Late Advance in Stocks.

MARKET HANDLED WELL

Southern Pacific Reaches the High est Point on the Present Movement-Slump in Consolidated Gas Causes Disturbance.

NEW YORK, July 30 .- The speculative evement for a rise in atocks encountered some difficulties today in the amount of made attractive by the considerable advances achieved last week. The accumulation of buying orders over a week-end is always buying orders over a week-end is always watched for by speculative holders to afford a market for absorbing profit-taking sales. The manner in which these are absorbed is regarded as an important index of the tone of the market. The buying orders on hand this morning from outside sources were not of imposing propertions, according to the complaints of commission houses. The supplying of stocks was done with care and the market was taken care of by skillful handling, so that small impression was made upon prices.

There were influential advances in special stocks at the same time, which served as a sustaining effect on the general list. The renewed advance in Southern Pacific to the highest point on the movement was a notable example. The disturbing effect of the evidence of profit-taking was much aggravated by a siump in Consolidated Gas when the official announcement was made that the Brooklyn Union Gas management had determined to suspend the payment of dividends until further motice. The possible bad effect upon securities of the measures and agitation directed against corporations has been much in the mind of the market operators up to the recent rise in stocks, since which time it has been relegated to the background.

Continued assertions of an early dividend for Southern Pacific and the strong showing expected of the United States Steel quarrerly statement of not sarnings to be published tomorrow were elements in the strength of these stocks. The market did not throw off the ill effects of the gas dividend passing, although there was severable but the close.

Chicago Wheat Market Weak the Entire Season.

IMMENSE GRAIN MOVEMENT

Receipts Are Over 200 Cars in Excess of the Amount Estimated. Foreign News Favorable to Bears.

CHICAGO, July 30 .- The wheat market was weak all day. At the start sentiment was influenced by liberal receipts at Chicago, the total arrivals today being more than 200 cars in excess of the amount that had been eain excess of the amount that had been estimated on Saturday. This heavy movement induced free seiling by cash sales of large quantities of wheat by several of the leading bulls. News in general was favorable to the bears. Foreign advices stated that weather conditions in France and the United Kingdom were favorable to harvest operations and reports from Russia were less pessimistic. An increase of 2,460,000 bushels in the visible supply gave additional encouragement to the fine. 186(20c); heavy fine, 146(17c); tub washed, 226(38%)c.

UNABLE TO FIND DAUGHTER Mrs. Anna Garvige, of Los Angeles,

Makes Unsuccessful Search. Mrs. Anna Garvige, an elderly woman whose mind appears to be affected through worry, spent all day yesterday about the police station, a most pitiful object. She came here from Log Angeles to lind a married daughter whom she had not heard from during the past year. The daughter's name is Mrs. Ida Cooper, wife of a painter, whose first name the old lady did not know. She was unable to get sny trace of Mrs. Cooper during two days of persistent search. She had very little money left and was afraid she would be left destitute and friendless.

The Salvation Army Rescue Home took the case in charge during the afternoon and learned that the daughter ternoon and learned that the daughter is thought to have removed to Astoria. That point was at once communicated with and every effort will be made by the Salvation Army workers to help the unfortunate woman out of her trouble.
