

ELIMINATES GAGE'S SUCCESSION

Shoots Himself After a Protracted Debauch at Hotel in Seattle.

ELUDES SEARCH BY WIFE

Spends Nearly $1000 Within Three Weeks and Dies Surrounded by Empty Bottles—Father ex-Secretary of Treasury.

SEATTLE, Aug. 2.—E. A. Gage, son of Lyman J. Gage, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, committed suicide this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Tourist Hotel, corner of Occident avenue and Main street, by shooting himself through the body with a 38-caliber revolver. He died a few minutes later. The only cause for the shooting which can be assigned is that he was temporarily insane from excessive drinking.

Gage's wife came here from Chicago last Monday and employed detectives to locate her husband, who was missing from his last address. Friends of the dead man believe he learned of his presence and fearing to meet her in his condition decided to end his life. Gage evidently knew that the detectives were on his track as he had registered at the Tourist Hotel under an assumed name, "J. W. Gorge." He went there July 23. Before that time he had been in the Greystones, where he went when he reached Seattle from Chicago July 7.

Registered Under False Name. Leaving there on July 16 he went to another hotel of the city and registered there, also under an assumed name. None of his baggage was at the Tourist. The suicide was discovered by Walter Brown, bell boy in the hotel, who heard Gage lying apparently dead. Officer Kees was then notified and he found the ambulance. By the time it had arrived Gage was breathing his last.

When found he was lying on his back, while beside him lay the revolver with which he had ended his life. He had stood before the mirror of his bureau evidently and placed the gun in his hand, a circular mark on his forehead showed that he had moved the muzzle of the weapon from the center of the chest to the left side. His left removed his coat, vest, collar and shoes.

Had New Dagger and Gun. When the shot was fired, Gage toppled over, which caused the dagger to fall in the position in which it was found. The revolver was a 38-caliber Colt, evidently brand new. A large dagger, also new, which was found on the bureau, made it appear as though he had contemplated taking his life for some time. Nothing was found in the room except four empty whisky bottles, quarts, and a flask which was half full of liquor.

On his person was found a bank book of the Commercial Bank of Commerce, which showed that he had deposited more than $1000 when he arrived here. On July 23 he had deposited a bank book in a statement of his balance remaining. He footed up $21.35, according to the bank's reply. The check book failed to show that any money had been drawn since that date.

Came Well Recommended. Inquiry at the bank showed that Gage had deposited money there after reaching Seattle from Chicago and that he had come highly recommended by Eastern and local persons.

Wife Arrived on Monday. Mrs. Gage arrived in Seattle from Chicago last Monday. In Chicago she reached the Greystones, where her husband had been stopping, and requested the hotel people to assist her in locating him. This she was unable to do, as he had left no word when he changed hotels.

Wife Accompanied by her 6-year-old son John, the elder son, Lyman, aged 10, remaining in Chicago with relatives. She did not know of her husband's death until late in the evening. On learning of the suicide, she went at once to J. S. Goldsmith, formerly connected with the N. A. T. & T. Company, who had been her husband's employer, and had sent him to Alaska more than ten years ago, and together they went to the morgue.

Weak From Long Illness. A Seattle man who had known Gage intimately for a number of years, declared it his belief that the suicide was the result of depression brought about by weakened physical and mental condition, the result of an illness which nearly carried him off a year ago in Chicago.

It is learned also that Mr. Gage went on periodical press, which weakened him greatly, and about which he worried a great deal. A friend of Mr. Gage said tonight: "Eli A. Gage was about 40 years of age. He was the only child of Lyman J. Gage, ex-Secretary of the Treasury. Born at Evanston, Ill., he spent his greater part of his life there and in Chicago. He attended Chester Academy, Penn., and after making a tour of the world took a position in his father's bank in Chicago.

There were no family troubles. He was devoted to his wife and children. While here he often talked of going west and once took out a letter from his wife and read it in sight of his friends. Mrs. Gage was to join him here with the children. There were no business reasons why he should have killed himself. No one knew of any business difficulties.

Father Now in California. SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 2.—Lyman J. Gage, when called up at Point Loma tonight, stated over the telephone that the name of the Seattle suicide corresponded with that of his son, but he thought it strange if it is the latter that is dead, that nobody in Seattle had notified him.

Left Chicago Years Ago. CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Eli A. Gage, who committed suicide in Seattle, left Chicago several years ago and went to Alaska during the gold excitement. For several years he was auditor of the North American Land Given Value by Construction of North-Bank Road—Timber Claims in Demand.

HOOD RIVER, Or., Aug. 2.—(Special.)—In view of the fact that the coming of the north-bank railroad will rapidly develop the tributary country on the Washington side, there is a scramble at present to acquire some of the land expected to be benefited. The White Salmon Valley is the Mecca at present of the homeseeker and investor, and intending purchasers, both men and women, are being taken across the river from here daily. So large has the trade become this summer that the company operating the ferry has been forced to increase its transportation facilities, and now has six boats instead of the three which were amply sufficient for the traffic a few weeks ago.

The large river boats are unloading more freight at White Salmon landing, it is said, than at any point on the river, and in many instances are refusing freight for that point from way landing. Camping outfits comprise no small part of the freight, and land-seekers are traversing the valley in all directions.

Most of the travel is in the direction of the Trout Lake region. The fortune-seekers are from almost every part of the United States. Easterners, plainmen of the Middle West and justling young men from the Pacific Coast cities of Portland and Seattle rub elbows in the ferry-boats and stages and exchange views on what the north-bank road may do for the Washington side of the river. Timber claims seem to be their ambition, and a number of women have filed on claims in isolated spots and are living there alone, with the intention of acquiring title to them by turning an honest penny by relinquishment to some eager investor.
