RIFLE RANGES ON THE COAST

Greely Urges Prompt Purchase of

Site at Vancouver.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Wash-ington, Aug. 23.-General Greely, in his annual report to the War Department, says:

A site for a permanent rifle range has been selected at Vancouver barracks and determined by use to be excellent. Options on the ground have been securized and its purchase is now pending. The necessary estimates have been forwarded to Washing-ton. This ground should be secured before the options expire.

General Greely says there is some ques-tion as to the safety of the range at American Lake, and General Funston has been directed to look over all the available ground near the lake with a view to selecting and purchasing a better range for Army competition. Fort Walla Walla is without adequate range. That on the Umatilla Indian reservation is inadequate and unsafe and the tenure uncertain. The post author-ities have been urged to find a suitable site, but so far have been unsuccessful. Unless a suitable target range can be found, says General Greeks, the permanent occupancy and improvement of Fort Walla Walla would seem to be of questionable value to the service.

Plans for a range at Fort Lawton were recently drawn, but the cost was found to be $24,310. The plans have been sent back for revision. It is probable that construction will commence next year and that the range will be ready for use by 1908. Speaking generally, General Greely says:

The importance of the Pacific Ocean a a probable factor in the strategy of future wars would seem to indicate the necessity of fortifying in the most complete manner the great harbors on this coast. As far as emplacements and armament are concerned the coast forts are now in a satisfactory condition, but in the installation of search-lights, position-finder stations, communica-tion and permanent fire control systems, this coast has been comparatively neglected.
