Wagon Piled High With Outfit, Drawn by Four Horses, Starts From Eugene, Where Pugillst's Friends Gather.

EUGENE, Or., Aug. 28.—(Special.)— A better-natured crowd never left Eugene than the Jeffries camping party. gene than the Jettres camping party, which started out early this morning for the wild country beyond Belknap Springs, in the Cascade Mountains. The friends of Jim Jeffries, who were to make this trip with the big champion and his wife, have been coming in from different parts of the United Staes for three days past, and the last strangers appeared vesterday.

Enited Staes for three days past, and the last straggler appeared yesterday. Beside Jeffries and his wife, the party consists of: E. W. Hopperstead and wife, their daughter, Miss Hopperstead, and son, L. Hopperstead. Dick Adams and Cy Myrick, all of Los Angeles, J. M. Omels, of New York City; George P. Miller, from Los Angeles. Watt Monteith, of Portland, will join the party in a day or two at the springs.

will join the party in a day or two at the springs.

Yesterday afternoon the men of the party were busy hustling ammunition, fishing tackle and camp supplies for the outing, and in the evening they were entertained by friends at the Commercial Club.

Posed as the Champion.

During the afternoon, while the party was away from the hotel, gathering the outfit for the trip, the center of attraction and person of importance was Fred Silvermann, of Portland, who will in the future be recognized by many a native of Lanc County as the champion heavyweight pugilist of the world. It came about this way. A tall, thin swaip from the Long Tom tall, thin swain from the Long Tom country tiptoed up to Bill Renshaw, who was in the office at the hotel, and who was in the office at the hotel, and told him that he had come in to see Jeffries and asked Mr. Renshaw if he would point him out.

The accommodating hotelkeeper raised his eyes from his book, and, catching sight of Silverman sitting scross the room, he indicated him as the champion. The stranger proceeded to walk around Silverman, who, knowing nothing of his borrowed fame, carried the part out to an artistic finish. ried the part out to an artistic finish. Late in the afternoon, after Silver-mann's shoulders and chest has been the subject of wide admiration, that individual began to become a little nervous with the careful eveing that his large frame seemed to compel from the boys and men about him, and the joke came out.

Big Man Oversleeps Himself.

When Jeffries turned in last night When Jeffries turned in last night he put in a call for 5 o'clock this morning. He had taken the key with him that unlocked the door to the baggage-room and was determined on getting an early start. But when about 5:30 Cy Myrick and Miller, who were the first of the party to turn out, tried to get things started they found that Joff had forgotten his call and it was after 6 before the husky camp manager appeared in the office of the hotel in his khaki suit and patent leather shoes, ready to superintend the loading of the supplies.

From the time the hig pugilist came downstairs until, the party pulled out from the time the hig puglist came downstairs until, the party pulled out he amused the boys and men, who had shuffled out to see him, with his goodnatured pranks, covering up his helpers as he tossed the heavy sacks of sait, sugar and provisions about like pillows, wherever he pleased. His anticipation of the trip was a been as ticipation of the trip was as keen as any boy's could have been and while all the party was in the best of spirits, one outshone Jefffries, who was the center of attention.

Wagon Loaded With Outfit.

By 6:30 the freight wagon was loaded with about a ton of luggage that will make the Jeffries camp com-fortable, and Jim Stuart's four big grays started the supplies toward the McKerste "We're going into the wildest coun try we can find and will stay till we feel like coming out," said Jeffries, and those who watched him getting his party off know that if hard work will get a bear, Jim will bring one back with him. Jeffries has talked nothing, thought of nothing since he will. with him. Jeffries has talked nothing, thought of nothing since he arrived in Eugene but this camping trip. He says he is feeling fine, and when he left the dining-room at the hotel, just after breakfast, he said:

"How long will it be before we can get dinner? Of course, I'm not thinking of myself, but poor Miller here. I'll have to look after him." and he chugged the thinnest man in the party, who had been up from an early hour who had been up from an early bour seeing that things were going all right. Morning Is a Delight.

The morning was perfect as the two rigs pulled away from the Smeede Hotel, and the drive during the morning, while dusty, was otherwise de-lightful. They took dinner at O'Brien's. The afternoon heat was modified by The afternoon heat was modified by reaching the timber line, and the party is spending the night at Peplot's. To-morrow, by noon, they will reach Blue River, and by evening they will make Foley Springs, where their headquarters will be established and their mail and telegrams sent. From here they will make their trip into the heart of the mountains on horseback and afoot. A guide has not yet been secured for the interior trip, but the man chosen

A guide has not yet been secured for the interior trip, but the man chosen will likely be Arthur Belkmap. He will lead them back through the rough country to the lakes and probably into the swamp land, where hunting is best. This trip can be made only by packing supplies in with horses. There are many people here who will be interested to know of the success of this jelly party who are out for the time of their lives in quest of game, fish and recreation on the McKenzie.

BILL HURLEY SHOT BY POLICE

Battered Head of Railroad Brakeman With a Two-by-Four.

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 28.—(Special.)—With a "two-by-four" for a bat and the head of William Usher for a ball, Bill Hurley, manager of the Gray's Harbor team, slarted a game not on the schedule. The team at bat was composed of Hurley and J. M. Tripiett, a former Indian but now a member of the Warwick team. The team at bat was composed of Hurley and J. M. Triplett, a former Indian but now a member of the Warwick team.

Hurley took a crack at Usher with the improvised bat and started to run. Special Officer R. H. Landers called to Hurley and ordered him back. Bill kept on running and only stopped after the officer had shot him in the back part of the thingh. The wound is not serious, but will keep the ballplayer out of the game for the rest of the season. He was taken to the hospital, where a douter fished around to get the bullet. Hurley left the hospital this morning. His troubles are not over as yet. He has a charge of assault and battery to face in the Police Court. Usher, the vic-tim of the assault, is a Great Northern brakeman.

PERSECUTION, SAYS FORDNEY

Michigan Congressman Gives Opinion on Land-Fraud Cases.

ABERDEEN, Wash, Aug. 28.—(Special.)—Before a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night, called to take action on the proposed visit of the Gruy's Harbor Congressional River and Harbor Commission. Congressman Fordney, of Michigan, who was a guest of the body and a large holder of timber in Wash-ington and Oregon, incidentally brought the matter of the Government procution of land-fraud cases and made a defense of Binger Hermann and of the late Senator Mitchell, declaring that in both cases it was largely a matter of persecution with the Government. As to Mr. Hermann, Mr. Fordney said he believed him to be absolutely innocent of the charges, and as to Senator Mitch-ell, it was not an intentional act in his opinion, nor was he a guilty man.

IRRIGATION CANALS DELAYED

Contractors Are Unable to Secure

Men at Their Prices. DCHO, Or., Aug. 28.—(Special.).-Contractors for the Government irrigation canals near this place are unable to secure men at any reasonable price. Work will be delayed until a larger force can be secured. As many as can be gathered will be employed, but until the close of harvest it is not expected that anywhere near the necessary number can be se-cured, and even then it is thought that there will be a scarcity.

Added to the car shortage, the difficulties in obtaining men greatly retard the building of the dam at the head of the intaking canal, which must be completed before the Umatilia rises with the Fall rains or be delayed another year.

Chopped to Death in Sleep.

Apparently the parent had fallen asleep in his chair while reading some after a light luncheon of bread and milk. The boy carefully stuffed the keyholes with cotton, to stifle the sound from other occupants of the house, then going down the back-stairs again, he got an ax from a neighbor's woodpile and, returning stealthily, he cut his father almost to pieces while he siept.

It was necessary to hide the crime.

It was necessary to hide the crime, and the boy decided to build up the appearance of a highway murder. Sneaking downstairs again, he found a wheelbarrows filled row filled with apples in a neighbor's yard. Emptying the apples, he brought the barrow to the stairway and, carry-ing his father's body down to it, he wheeled the remains for nearly two blocks at midnight through the street in the business district. Then he tossed his father's body into the rear of a barn.

Bloody Rags Are Hidden.

Returning home, the patricide put the barrow in the neighbor's yard, refiled it with the apples and put the ax on the woodpile. Going upstairs, he found the room looking like a shambles. He washed the floor, scrubbed down the bloody stairway, hid the rugs and at breakfast time was found calmly sprinkling the yard and inquiring casually why his father had not come home at night.
