"JACK" MARSHALL RETURNS

FORMER PORTLAND MAN BECOMES RICH IN NEVADA.

Mining and Banking Ventures Pay Him Big Profits--Finds Old Home "Too Slow."

J. F. Marshall, better known as "Jack" Marshall, former Portland banker, Exposition promoter and politician, accompanied by Mrs. Marshall and his daughter, are spending a few days visiting friends in this city, after an absence of more than two years, during which he has been pursuing Dame Fortune with success in the wilds of the new Nevada goldfields. Happy, almost as talkative as ever and wearing that beaming smile affected by prosperous men, Jack Marshall is busy telling his many friends of his good luck.

The former Portland man is interested in several mining ventures and banking enterprises in Goldfield, and is a member of the Board of Trade and other commercial bodies of that mushroom city.

"I love Portland and Portland people," Marshall said last evening, launching into his favorite pastime of talking of places and things, "but I am afraid the city and its people did not reciprocate that affection, for I never succeeded in amassing anything for John P. here, no matter how hard I labored. Twenty years in Portland, and hardly anything to show for it, was the record I made here. Compare that with two years in Nevada, and practical independence! It seems incredible, but nevertheless it is true. The principal fault I have found with Portland is that its population contains too many 'outthroats,' not only in the criminal sense, but commercially, for in my experience I have found that the moment a man starts on the upward climb here, others try their hardest to drag him down, and unfortunately in many instances they succeed only too well.

Portland and Seattle are too slow. Look at Los Angeles. Young man, there is the town of the Pacific Coast. At the present time they have 350,000 people there and are increasing at phenomenal rate. Los Angeles is a larger city than San Francisco--if you take the trouble to investigate you

POLICEMEN SALOON BUMS

REVELATIONS AT A HEARING AMAZE MAYOR LANE.

Executive Emphatically Expresses His Opinion of Bluecoats Who Accept Hospitality of Dives.

Patrolmen stationed in the North End are accustomed to take their daily "rips" and to eat "free lunch" in the saloons of that district, according to the testimony of Patrolman Fields, who was hauled before the police committee yesterday on a charge of cowardice. During a fight in the Burnside Exchange saloon recently, Fields was accused by Patrolman Wade of exhibiting lack of nerve, failing to come to Wade's assistance when the latter was attacked by two men. The committee has not determined what action it will take.

After Wade had accused him of "showing the white feather," Fields made countercharges, alleging that Wade had taken too much whiskey the night of the trouble. In his testimony yesterday, Fields declared that other officers were in the habit of accepting drinks from the saloon-keepers without offering to pay for them. This interested the members of the committee and they are determined to sit the matter to the bottom.

Fields said that when Wade took the whiskey, he himself accepted a cup of coffee from the saloon-keeper. Coffee was served in a back room.

"Is it customary for officers when on duty to eat lunches and take drinks in back rooms of saloons?" inquired R. L. Sabin, a member of the committee.

"Yes, occasionally," was the reply.

This aroused the indignation of Mayor Lane, and he expressed his opinion of patrolmen who accepted favors from saloon men.

"The habit of bunning lunches or drinks from a saloon man puts you under obligations," asked the Mayor.

Fields admitted that it did.

"It's the worst kind of bunning," continued Mayor Lane. "It is nearly as bad as being a vag. Anybody that bums that way has no right to arrest a man for vagrancy."

Henry Maier and Charley Webber, of the Burnside Exchange, who had the fight with Wade, were called. They

M'ALLEN & M'DONNELL

It is money in our pocket when the beef trust markets cheat on weights, and serve poor, tough meats, and advertise things they do not intend to sell. People know that Smith gives a SQUARE DEAL, and the people stay with Smith.
