

FIGHTER STEVENS

Dethroned Boss of Multnomah County Is Pulling Wires at Salem.

REPAIRING HIS MACHINE

Uses County Court as Nucleus for New Organization—Sly Scheme to Defeat Bill Introduced on Sheriff's Behalf.

Members of the Multnomah delegation and friends of Sheriff Stevens are convinced that the fight of the County Court to cut down the emoluments of the Sheriff's office comes from old Jack Matthews' regime. On special order today, house bill 243 will come up. The bill was introduced by Representative Driscoll and provides that the Sheriff shall have custody and control of all persons confined in the County Jail.

The bill also provides that the money to be paid to the Sheriff for the meals of prisoners at 12 1/2 cents. Since the bill was introduced, some members of the Multnomah delegation have been making the price of meals at 14 cents. Some were even in favor of making it 15 cents, and perhaps the price would have been fixed at 14 cents, but for the fact that little opposition came from the members of the Multnomah delegation who are still sailing on Jack Matthews' badly wrecked political ship. The lack of opposition has set some of the wise ones to thinking deeply, and remembering that much of the campaign thunder that was hurled at Tom Ward was based on the money that was made by him through feeding the county's prisoners at 17 1/2 cents, they became suspicious.

The story goes that the Matthews crowd in the House was to make an apparent fight on the bill, add 2 cents more to the price already fixed by the bill and then withdraw. It was expected that much of the talk that was used in the Word campaign.

Hudson, Beach and Bailey are said to be in the combination. Senator Matthews, because he was Word's main and fought Sheriff Stevens in the recent campaign, fell into line, but now, so the Sheriff's friends say, he is still very much an awakening. They say that Senator Nottingham was not ashamed of the work he did for Word, but when some kind legislation was introduced which was lining up with the Matthews crowd, he balked.

Makes Strange Bedfellows.

Some wise man long ago said that "politics makes strange bedfellows." This is applicable in the case of Hudson, Beach and Bailey. Hudson, everybody knows is a Matthews man. Beach, until recently was a staunch and true Simonite. What magnet drew him about the Matthews affair undoubtedly Beach can tell, the same as to Hudson. When the bill came up for discussion, Beach thought if the Sheriff were paid 9 cents for feeding the prisoners that would be enough. What Hudson and Bailey thought or said about the bill is not known. From time to time since the Matthews ship was wrecked there has been persistent gossip that he still controlled in charge of the county's business. Try as might the friends of the fallen boss to kill the rumor, it will not down and those who claim to be "in the know" and who are not in the elements nor laid low the telephone wires between Portland and Salem, the evidences of this control would have been still more apparent than they are now. Yesterday this gossip was rife that Jack Matthews was playing at being dead politically, yet at the same time with the county officials as a nucleus, was busy signing a new crew for his political craft.

To back this statement up, and to show that Matthews still has patronage to distribute, a story is told that it was impossible for a man to get the appointment as watchman on the ferry Lional R. Webster unless the man resided in a certain house in Portland. The story has it that several applied to Judge Webster for the job, and all were turned down; that Judge Webster gave some of the applicants to understand that he must consult someone else before he made the appointment. The "someone else" is said to have been none other than Jack Matthews.

More County Court Gossip.

Another bit of County Court gossip is that when Judge Webster and his two County Commissioners began their war on Stevens, a scout was sent out among the Multnomah delegation to see what effect it was having. When the scout was informed that it went at all what the many friends of Bob Stevens in the delegation would stand for, the message was duly delivered. By this time it is believed that the cards again, so the deal went on and the seed that was sown will be reaped when House bill 243 comes up today.

Just how strong the Matthews line-up is will be shown; that is, unless some of the timid ones get a touch of the recent blizzard in the vicinity of their pedal extremities.

Certain members of the Multnomah delegation who resent the fight that the County Court and the County Commissioners have made have still a few more barbs to hurl at them in the shape of new bills. One bill that may be introduced provides that a county judge's duties will be restricted to county business. This bill has not been much talked of as yet, but it has been drafted and is ready to be introduced at any time.

WANTS PUBLIC HEARING

Paul Rader Will Face His Accusers This Afternoon.

Paul Rader, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in Oregon, will attempt this afternoon before the board of trustees of the organization to explain away the formal charges against him that time will be made against him. The meeting will be held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium and it is probable that it will be public. Mr. Rader has expressed a willingness to admit newspaper men and those who have started the investigation are not opposed to such a course. "I have nothing to hide," Mr. Rader said when he expressed a desire to have reporters present.

A determined fight will be made to unseat Mr. Rader. Certain members of the board will ask that Mr. Rader tender his resignation and that proposal will be put to a vote. Many of the trustees have showed a disposition, it is alleged, to drop the affair and will attempt to vote down any motion that will require the resignation of Mr. Rader.

It is understood that Mr. Rader will make an address and answer the charges.

A. G. BARKER PASSES AWAY

Well-Known Portland Railroad Man a Victim of Pneumonia.

A. G. Barker, assistant general agent of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, died at midnight, at his home, 714 Franklin street, of pneumonia. Mr. Barker had been ill only since Friday. He leaves a wife and a grown daughter. The arrangements for the funeral will be announced later. Burial will be in Portland, where Mr. Barker had lived for the past 18 years.

Few officials of Railroad Row had more friends than Mr. Barker. He had the respect and the affection of all who knew him. During a long connection with the road he represented, he had gained an extensive acquaintance in all parts of the state. Nowhere was he more highly esteemed than in Portland where he was best known. So sudden was Mr. Barker's illness that but a few of his friends had learned of his serious condition. The news of his death will prove a shock to a large number in the transportation business as well as to many in other vocations.

War Talk Makes Blood Flow Faster

A. D. Rockafellow, When Heart Almost Ceases to Beat, Starts His Circulation by Talking of Japanese Crisis.

Excitement over the rumors of a war between the United States and Japan saved the life of A. D. Rockafellow, a Civil War veteran, formerly of this city, but now of Seattle, who is dangerously ill with heart trouble at the Hotel Portland. He is slowly recovering but declares that had it not been for the war talk which caused excitement and stimulated his circulation, he would have died Saturday night when his condition was very critical.

Mr. Rockafellow was feeling very weak Saturday and physicians worked with him all day. At night he was placed in the care of a trained nurse. During the night he suffered a relapse and his heart was hardly beating. The nurse became alarmed and wanted to call a physician, fully believing that Mr. Rockafellow would not survive.

"Just talk of something exciting and I'll pull through alright," whispered the sick man to that nurse.

The quick-witted nurse, who knew that Mr. Rockafellow had been in the Civil War, began to talk of the possibility of a civil war between the Americans and the Japanese. This aroused the patriotic ardor of Mr. Rockafellow and for an hour or more he almost forgot that he was sick. He talked of the war, and his physicians believe that he will recover.

Mr. Rockafellow was struck with an iron rail about 12 years ago when he was working in Portland and his head was shoved about an inch out of position. He says that it is regaining its natural position and hopes that he will not suffer again from that source.

"I don't know much about the Japanese but I do know that they practically saved my life the other night," said Mr. Rockafellow yesterday afternoon. "When we began to talk about the Japs thinking they can whip us Americans, my blood began to boil and there was no trouble about my circulation."

Mr. Rockafellow served through the entire five years of the Civil War, enlisting when he was 15 years of age. Like all old veterans he is satisfied that the United States is a noble and easily aroused when the question of war is discussed.

Nearly everyone who has ever visited Seattle knows Mr. Rockafellow. He has lived there for the last six years for the benefit of his health. He is very popular among the cottagers and his flower garden is one of the noted sights at his pleasure resort. Mr. Rockafellow makes frequent trips to Portland. He lived here a quarter of a century and for years was a member on the O. R. & N. river steamer.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Superintendent Edward Budd, of Mr. Harriman's "Cranberry and Clamshell route" along the North Beach, otherwise known as the I. R. & N., spent yesterday in Portland with his family. He reports the North Beach extension of the Ilwaco road as progressing favorably. Mr. Budd's experiments in cranberry culture have been so satisfactory that the Ilwaco marshes promise to become as famous as those of Cape Cod.

RAIN FALLS AND FREEZES

More Snow Among Possibilities for This Section—Cattle and Sheep Starving in Eastern Oregon and Idaho.

WEATHER CONDITIONS IN PACIFIC NORTHWEST.

THE STORM—Yesterday brought no relief in the storm situation in the Pacific Northwest. The snow continues to fall in the Upper Columbia River Valley and there is much snow on the ground between Portland and Huntington. The suffering of livestock in Eastern Oregon and Northern Idaho from lack of fodder is increasing.

THE FORECAST—Rain or snow and easterly winds for Portland and vicinity; rain turning into snow and colder weather for Eastern Oregon. Snow and continued cold is predicted for Northern Idaho.

With unabated fury the blizzard continues to sweep over Eastern Oregon, where thousands of cattle and sheep are faced with starvation, and in Portland the storm continues in the form of another "silver thaw." In the city yesterday and last night there was a drizzling rain which, though it fell, snow covers the ground practically the entire length of the Upper Columbia River Valley, extending to Huntington. At The Dalles there is nearly three feet of snow and in Eastern Oregon, where the storm is at its height, there are no signs of early relief. Train service on the O. R. & N. is completely stopped.

Except for a decided drop in temperature at Spokane, where the mercury fell 10 degrees, the temperature in the Northwest has remained about the same during the past 24 hours. Rain, snow and sleet have fallen in the Willamette Valley and the Sound country. The Willamette River is slowly rising at up-stream points, but at Portland has practically remained stationary.

Conditions in Eastern Oregon continue to grow worse and the weather forecast gives no reason to hope for a favorable change soon. The forecast for Eastern Oregon is "Rain, changing into snow, and colder." Already the snow, which is several feet deep, is covered with ice, adding to the suffering of the livestock. Rain on top of this will increase the thickness of the ice crust.

There is a shortage of feed in nearly all parts of Eastern Oregon, and if the weather does not moderate within the next few days hundreds of stockmen will be ruined. The snow has covered up what feed there is on the ranges and the grass is made inaccessible by the covering of ice which the cattle are unable to break. At some points there is an abundance of feed and the stockmen are trying to drive their herds to these places, but slow progress is being made and thousands of cattle and sheep are dying by the way from exhaustion and hunger.

A blizzard is raging in Northern Idaho, and in Lewiston it is reported that the stock and sheepmen of the vicinity are alarmed and declare that unless the storm abates very quickly their herds will be decimated. Their prospects are no brighter or than those of the stockmen of Eastern Oregon, as the forecast for that section is "Snow and continued cold."

In Portland up to midnight a drizzling rain was falling, which froze in falling. Electric wires and trees began to grow heavy under the constantly increasing coating of ice and the electric companies fear further losses. The present "silver thaw" is the worst yet in one last week, but it may grow worse. The mercury hovers about the freezing point and rain or snow for this vicinity is predicted.

The streets and sidewalks of Portland were in deplorable shape yesterday. The slush was several inches deep and in the alleys and on the pavements were not kept clear, with few exceptions, by the fact that but few of the stores were open. At night the slush froze and rendered walking extremely difficult.

SNOW BLOCKADE ON O. R. & N.

Most Trouble Between Bridal Veil and Bonneville.

The O. R. & N. was blocked yesterday between Bridal Veil and Bonneville by snowdrifts. No trains departed from Portland yesterday and it is not likely that any will leave the city before noon today. The last passenger to get through was No. 6, leaving Portland at 8:15 Saturday night.

There was a heavy snow storm yesterday along the Upper Columbia throughout Eastern Oregon. The point of the greatest trouble was in the Columbia gorge, between Bonneville and Bridal Veil. Here repeated snowdrifts blocked the line. As soon as one slide would be cleared another would come down from the hills, completely burying the track again.

A freight train leaving Portland Saturday night, consisting of two locomotives and 20 cars, was partly buried by a heavy slide near Bridal Veil. The engines and 10 cars were covered by the slide. The imprisoned train was dug out yesterday. Westbound trains were held at The Dalles yesterday and unless the line is cleared of snow early today, a boat will be sent up to bring the passengers on to Portland. Large crews of men and a rotary snow plow were working all day yesterday and last night in the attempt to clear away the slides, and it was thought that the greatest trouble would be over this morning unless the snow continues to fall.

At The Dalles yesterday afternoon the snow was three feet deep on level according to advice received by General Manager O'Brien. All along the line there was a heavy fall of snow. All trains were annulled yesterday until 2:30 this morning.

It is expected that the snow will be cleared away by noon tomorrow," said General Manager O'Brien last night. "The work is discouraging by reason of the fact that as soon as the snow is cleared away, another comes down from the cliffs and covers the tracks again. The snow fall is very heavy and it is not advisable to run trains out tonight in view of the uncertainty of their getting through. Unless the storm continues to moderate, the line will undoubtedly be opened early in the day."

The Spokane line has been cleared and the track between Walla Walla and Pendleton is expected to be open tomorrow night. Trains 3 and 6, leaving Portland Saturday night, got through all right, and if the track is not opened

STOCK FREEZE IN MONTANA

Losses in Herds From Present Storm Will Be Enormous.

BUTTE, Mont., Feb. 3.—Kon Kohrs, of Deer Lodge, one of the most prominent stockmen of the state, is in Butte, and states that he is in receipt of advices from the Northern ranges that serious stock losses will reach about 50 per cent of his herds, so fierce is the storm that is sweeping the Northern districts of Montana.

Mr. Kohrs states that the conditions in Valley County and the other big cattle and sheep sections are simply appalling, the stock dying by the hundreds.

The long plains of Northern Montana afford the stock little shelter from the stinging sweep of the snow and wind. Unable to break the crust of ice covering the grass of the ranges, the cattle and sheep huddle in bunches of from 50 to 100 in the coulees, there to drop from exhaustion and hunger and die. Bunches of dead cattle catch the drifting snow, which soon buries them completely, with the exception of an occasional protruding leg or head. These mounds of snow frequently dot the ranges and only too plainly indicate how fearfully the herds are being ravaged by the terrific weather prevailing.

If cars could be had, many head of stock could be saved, but in view of the great scarcity of rolling stock, flockmasters are offering their sheep for sale at from 30 to 50 cents per head, or in fact almost any price, in some localities, in an effort to save at least something.

Advices from throughout the state tonight show little change from the low temperatures reported yesterday.

Great Northern and Northern Pacific traffic is demoralized.

WOMAN SLEEPS IN SHED

Refined Mother and Child Rescued by Tacoma Police.

TACOMA, Wash., Feb. 3.—(Special.)—Pitiful is the story of Mrs. R. H. Bushell, who was found by Detective Leydard in an open shed at South Vesper street this morning. She had spent the entire night under its flimsy shelter in company with a small four-year-old girl, while the temperature was below the freezing point and the snow was sifting through the walls and piling in small drifts in all corners of the shack.

From the appearance and talk of the woman it is believed she is mentally deranged. To some of the officers she said she came from Australia, and to others London, Los Angeles and Seattle were the names given. She is unmistakably an English woman and the accent is strong in her speech, which is that of a highly educated and refined person.

Boxing Instructors Under Bail.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Thomas Shortell and Alfred G. They are charged with aiding and abetting a private boxing match.

LEAVE IT TO CONSCIENCE

Old Soldiers Do Not Favor Legislation Restricting Civil or Religious Liberty—Compulsory Observance Not Desirable.

At the meeting of Summer Post No. 12, G. A. R., Saturday night, the bill that is before the Legislature relating to the observance of Memorial day was up for consideration. It was the opinion of those who expressed themselves that there should be no law to restrict anybody's movements on Memorial day. M. L. Pratt, to express the sentiment of the post, introduced the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, An item in the daily press of this city of the passage of Senate bill No. 38, as amended by the committee on education, prohibiting games, racing, etc., before 2 o'clock P. M. on Memorial day, was denounced by Senator Bailey and others who voted against the bill as being "an insult to old soldiers." Therefore,

Resolved, By Summer post, No. 12, Dept. of Oregon, G. A. R., that we commend the action of Senator Bailey and others who voted against the bill as amended by the committee on education, for their loyalty to right, commendable judgment, and love of justice. While we do not consider it an insult to the G. A. R., we do consider it one to the patriotism, intelligence and loyalty of the people of this commonwealth. The G. A. R. stands in favor of "blue laws" under any disguise, that restrict civil or religious liberty. The members of this organization fought, starved in prison pens and endured hardships for a few years that human liberty might be consummated on this continent. They have given Memorial day as a heritage to the people of this Nation, in order to help preserve that National pride, which is in the hearts of liberty-loving Nation in the deeds of their forefathers, and set apart one day on which their minds might be diverted from the cares and anxieties of a busy life to the memories of those who fought the country's battles. They dispelled the darkest night that ever overshadowed a Nation's life, and let in a sunburst of peace, unity and prosperity unparalleled in the history of nations.

What they did is recorded upon the hearts of the people, and we do not easily and conscientiously believe the lessons of Memorial day can be more vividly impressed upon the hearts of our people through education, rather than through law. If the people through money-madness, National egoism and National conceit, forget the lesson which this day teaches, then, as in the case of all human events, the Nation must suffer the inevitable consequences of a failure to enforce justice and equal rights among all classes of its citizens. The G. A. R. stands today as it stood all through that memorable conflict, with its face to the foes of justice and liberty, and its arms outstretched to any man, or body of men, who advocate class legislation or any legislation restricting human liberty only so far as it pertains to the safety of society. One great object of government is to protect the weak against the strong; beyond this is dangerous ground. On this dangerous ground the seed is sown, the fruit of which is injustice, and the consequence of which is a discontented people.

Resolved, That we believe any law restricting human action and freedom of conscience on Memorial day, or any other day, is impracticable and impossible of enforcement; and that any law, not strictly enforced, is containing the seed of effect upon all law, and serves in making the enforcement of necessary laws more difficult, besides engendering in the minds of the masses a contempt and a disregard for all law.
