clerk of the Municipal Court, Frank D. Hennessey, and when he came, a warrant was issued and placed in the hands of the police for service.

But a few minutes remained before the time, and it was a hop-skip-and-jump proposition for the officers to reach the depot in time. Every one connected with the case was rushing pell-mell to get into action, and at last it was found that the much-wanted Wilson and companion were not on the train, although, to be certain, Detective Price went as far as Linton, looking carefully through every coach.

Fully convinced the pair was still in the city waiting for an opportunity to get away, the police worked the railroad route, and it was simply means the notifying by wire of every town marshal at places through which it is necessary to pass to get away from Portland.

Mrs. Wilson took a very active part in the chase, doing what no other woman has ever done by boarding the Puget Sound limited train at 4 o'clock with Acting Detective Inskeep and inspecting every coach to see if her recreant husband was there. He was not, and when Goble was reached, the Portland-bound Northern Pacific passenger was just pulling out. Mrs. Wilson tried to get up on the steps, but fell, and a brakeman saved her from injury by pulling her aboard.

Wilson had not yet been captured when his wife and Inskeep returned to police headquarters, and she immediately beseeched Chief Gritzmacher to "hit the wires" which he at once prepared to do. Before he finished his list of dispatches, however, word came that the arrests had been made at Oregon City.

Seeks Escape in an Auto.

In a desperate effort to escape from the city without detection, the couple had engaged an automobile and went to Linton, hoping to catch the train for the Sound from that point, but they failed and returned. The only hope left was the Oregon City route, and they had the chauffeur take them thither. High hopes were dashed as they were stepping aboard the Southern Pacific southbound train, they were seized and pulled to the platform by the officers; placed under arrest and were soon speeding toward Portland and disgrace, in charge of Detective Price.

Wilson was armed with a heavy-caliber revolver, fully loaded, and this was taken from him immediately after his arrest, as Detective Price had been told by Mrs. Wilson to be careful. Price rode from the Union Depot to Oregon City on the tender of an engine in order to catch the first glimpse of the fleeing couple, should they be found along the route. He spotted them at the Oregon City depot as the engine went past, and he was soon down and after them.

Mrs. Taylor, who is considered a handsome woman of the blonde type, nearly faints when she was placed under arrest, and the scene was embellished with an abundance of the dramatic. She cried bitterly upon reaching the Portland police headquarters. Loretta and repeated efforts by Wilson to secure bail of $200 each for himself and Mrs. Taylor failed, and they spent the night in the City Jail.

CAPTURE AT OREGON CITY

Mrs. H. H. Wilson Causes Arrest of Her Husband and Mrs. T. W. Taylor, Who Sought to Elope by the Aid of an Automobile.

In an effort to apprehend H. H. Wilson, a bookkeeper, the entire police department was kept on the jump yesterday afternoon from 1 o'clock until 10 last night. The wires were buzzing with messages to town marshals directing them to catch the alleged culprit, who was trying hard to make his way out of the state with Mrs. Taylor, wife of ex-Police Sergeant T. W. Taylor. His own wife, accompanied by Acting Detective Inskeep, went to Linton on the Northern Pacific train at 4 o'clock, found no trace of the hunted man and returned. While waiting for the next o'clock Pacific Oregon City, at 9 o'clock, the fugitive and his companion were taken into custody by Acting Detective Price.

Chief Gritzmacher was seated in his office, writing more telegrams to be flashed abroad, when news of the capture was telephoned in from Oregon City. Breathing a sigh of relief, Chief Gritzmacher explained that, not for long months, had he been kept as busy trying to locate and arrest a man as he had been all day in the endeavor to head off Wilson and his fair companion, Mrs. Wilson, who entered a complaint, intended to end the unlawful elopement, did not know whether to be glad or sad. She had been wavering throughout the busy hours of the afternoon and evening, first being enthusiastic for prosecution and then wishing that the case be dropped.

The Wrangled Wife Repents.

Once during the afternoon, just after the departure of the Puget Sound limited train for the Sound, Mrs. Wilson almost repeated her act in sneaking out the warrant for her husband, and begged at police headquarters that it be recalled, but the officers were obdurate, insisting that a crime had been committed. As it was clearly their duty to make the arrest, they held out against her, and used every means at their command to bring him to book.

Mrs. Wilson appeared at police headquarters at 1 o'clock and explained that her husband had eloped with another woman, and that they were due to leave for Puget Sound on the limited train at 2 o'clock. There was no time to be lost, and Captain Moore advised her to hurry to the office of District Attorney Manning, where she was quickly informed of the plan, charging a statutory offense. Returning to the headquarters building, she was eagerly awaiting the arrival of the

CHINESE NEW YEAR BEGINS WITH ENOUGH NOISE TO SHAKE THE CITY

Feasting, Exchange of Calls, Burning of Punk and Incense, Religious Ceremonies and Explosion of Fireworks are Features of the Celestial Holiday.

AFTER AN EVENING of busy preparation and a few preliminary fireworks on Second street yesterday, the news was gently broken to Portland at midnight that the Chinese New Year was "on" in good earnest. Many former San Franciscans living within a radius of a mile of Chinatown thought it was an earthquake, and some would-be joker declared that Mayor Lane planned in from his suburban home on Outman road to inquire if the Japanese had attacked this port; but in reality, it was only a mild fore-runner of what will follow tonight, tomorrow night and several other nights to come. For the Chinaman is a great believer in the efficacy of pure and unadulterated noise, and in this greatest of celebrations this item is not to be overlooked for one moment.

All the devils that ever poked inquisitive red noses into the dark and narrow passages of Chinatown to lure poor Lee into the wicked ways of the Mecca man will be put to flight by the noise route tonight. The chase will be a wild one, but it is the duty of the police to quickly put to flight the Confucian teaching, to banish the devils on the New Year's celebration, so if there are many of these cloven-footed individuals in the neighborhood of Second street at present, it will be well for them to move on. After they are gone, and all debts have been paid, the genuine good time of the year will come, and there will be much heart-joy among the tongs. There will be feasting, there will be exchange of calls; incense and punk will be burned by the bushes. The junk is decorated as on no other occasion, all the rich decorative purposes. The best of everything is brought out, and the occasion is made a memorable one, for the New Year's to a Chinaman equals a combination of all the American holidays, put together with a few extra "Glorious Fourths" thrown in for good measure.

While several hundred dollars' worth of firecrackers were sent off last evening just to warm things up, it will be tonight that the real firing will begin. The joss houses and restaurants will be open and the public will have an opportunity to satisfy its curiosity. Last night many went down and watched the preparatory work, as seemed to enjoy them almost as much as the Celestials themselves. A girl with a big red nose on her turban became much interested in watching several merchants at their dinner, their manipulation of chopsticks fascinating her. She had her face pressed close to the window when one of them started for the door to disperse the crowd. She lost no time in taking her departure, but saw the humor of the situation and asked her escort if he thought they took her for one of the devils.

In store further up the street a little woman in a gray tailored suit ventured to put her hands on a counting board which lay on the counter, but the growl of the lusty old accountant, who sat huddled up in the corner, nearly frightened her out of her wits. Many attempted to go into the joss-house, but were denied admittance, as the general reception does not begin until tonight.

If a Chinaman sees you, this is the time to collect. If you are a devil, keep out of his way. It is Chinese New Year.

B. Fallows Would Pass Appropriation for Songsters.

B. Fallows, president of the Song Bird Club, comes to the aid of House Bill No. 28, a measure for the appropriation of $500 for colonizing foreign and domestic songbirds in this state. He shows that this work is one worthy of support, especially when it is known that the various songsters are the only birds that are highly useful in addition to adding to the pleasure of every resident of the state by their singing.

Mrs. Fallows gives statistics of the insect life destroyed by birds of the various kinds which it is desired to introduce. While he states the economic importance of the society's efforts has been of secondary importance, these are such that they should not be overlooked. LANE NAMES CHIEF Gritzmacher Appointed Head of Police by Mayor.

Captain Carl C. Gritzmacher was appointed to the position of Chief of Police yesterday afternoon by Mayor Lane, and members of the City Council who have been active in their effort to force the executive to name a Chief declare they have won a distinct victory.

Gritzmacher will serve as Chief of Police until July 1, when he will retire from the city's service, as announced by him

COUNCIL CLAIMS VICTORY

Members Believe They Forced Mayor to Act by Withholding Salary for Chief Until Appointment Should Be Fully Made.

MR. DOOLEY APPEARS SUNDAY

Mr. Dooley was ill practically all of last week. Though he looks forward to the general philosopher's reviews of current topics in 'The Sunday Oregonian' will be glad to hear that Mr. Dooley (P. P. Dunne) will take up his pen again, so that his series will be resumed next Sunday.

In the Oregonian of January 22, immediately after his appointment yesterday, he repeated his intention, thus eliminating him from all police problems after that date.

Mayor Lane's letter, naming Gritzmacher Chief, was very brief. It stated that from this date, the appointment would hold. Congratulations were in order, and the man who has served in the Portland Police Department for 23 years, working his way up to the post from the most humble position, was made to feel that he had the approval of the entire force.

While the Councilmen who have been fighting to bring about the appointment of a Chief of Police by refusing to appropriate the salary until a Chief was named, feel that they have won a big victory. It is expected in police circles that the Mayor has plans that will somewhat lessen the triumph of his opponents in that body. For one thing, it makes sure a comfortable berth for Captain Gritzmacher unless the Council renews its attack upon him in the courts and compels him to step out.

The Council recently refused to allow salaries for more than two captains of police, and for a time it appeared that Bruin and Slover would be dropped. The Mayor, however, backed by his Executive Board, found a provision in the charter which gives the Mayor the number of captains, and they passed a resolution at the last meeting, declaring that the four captains in the service were necessary, and an additional captain should be had for the proposed East Side station, soon to be organized.

"There is a strong rumor in police circles now to the effect that Mayor Lane and his Executive Board intend to retaliate on the Council by declaring in the near future that three new captains are necessary to officer the East Side station, and it is predicted that, if this is done, it will be a double blow and the biggest victory yet scored by the Mayor against his antagonists in the Council.

The Council, it is said, unanimously worked to oust Captain Bruin from the department, but as yet has failed to accomplish this end, and that officer still holds down a $25 a month job as head of the detective bureau.

Rival Union Organizations Settle Controversy and Will Unite.

As the result of conferences that have been held for the past two weeks, there will no longer be two painters' unions in Portland. The rival organizations, which have been fighting for the several past months, will become one, and the result promises the strongest organization the painters have ever had here.

Last September the painters went on strike for a half holiday on Saturdays. The employers refused the demand, and a number of non-union men along with which have been fighting for the several past months, will become one, and the result promises the strongest organization the painters have ever had here.

WAS AN OREGON PIONEER

Mrs. Agnes M. Crawford, Who Came to Coast in 1855.

Mrs. Agnes M. Crawford who was laid quietly to rest in the peaceful cemetery at Butteville on Sunday, February 10, was a pioneer woman who, in an early day, did much for the upbuilding of the good of the commonwealth.

Born in Toronto, Canada, on March 4, 1832, Mrs. Crawford, the Elias Barnhart, accompanied her parents to Oregon, arriving by the Isthmus route in the Fall of 1855. The Barnhart family settled on the Willamette River, near Starbuck, and there on February 3, 1857, Miss Barnhart was married to John D. Crawford, brother of the late Medeson Crawford, and with him she lived until the terrible experience of the flood of 1861, losing everything in the destruction of their home at Champosque.

Mrs. Crawford died on February 8, shortly after the family had moved to Portland, and where Mrs. Crawford resided continuously until her death the evening of February 7.

Mrs. Crawford had been in feeble health for some time, never having recovered from a severe illness last Spring.

A life-long church woman, Mrs. Crawford was one of the first women who welcomed the late Bishop Morris to Oregon, in 1880, and she had many pleasant memories of Bishop Scott and Father Tackler, those pioneers of the church in Oregon.

Mrs. Crawford is survived by one son, George G. Crawford, of Tacoma, and by four daughters, Charlotte B. Crawford, Mrs. Robert Warrack, Mrs. C. Jacobson, of Portland, and Mrs. J. R. Shaw, of Oregon City, while of her own generation one sister and three brothers survive, one of the latter being Major Barnhart, one of Portland's early pioneers.

JURY CANNOT AGREE

Mrs. Huntsman's Suit Against Money Lender Fails Again.

For the second time a jury in the State Circuit Court has proven unequal to the task of deciding on the merits of Catherine Huntsman's suit against R. I. Eckerson, a money broker. After being locked up nearly 26 hours the jury in the case decided that it could not reach an agreement and accordingly was dismissed yesterday forenoon by Judge Frazer. Notice of a third trial was at once prepared by Attorney Spencer, on behalf of Mrs. Huntsman.

Several weeks ago a jury disagreed on the same case. At that time it is said the jury stood ten to two for the plaintiff, while the second jury is said to have developed ten men who wanted to give Mrs. Huntsman $30 damages. The other two, however, held out for more, and as neither side would yield its position, dismissal ensued.

Mr. Maxman asks for $10,000 from the money lender because of his action in having her arrested under a charge that is alleged to have been groundless. Mrs. Huntsman borrowed $50 from the broker at various intervals. The furniture she offered as security for the loan had not been entirely paid for, and, learning this, Eckerson caused her arrest on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. It is said he hoped thereby to force a settlement of his claim. Mrs. Huntsman was taken to the police station and suffered other humiliations which she rates at $10,000.

DEATH OF ACTIVE WOMAN

Mrs. Julia Tyler Was Prominent in Church Work.

Mrs. Julia Warren Tyler, of 322 Fourteenth street, for 25 years a resident of this city, died at 10 o'clock yesterday, February 8, at the Good Samaritan Hospital. She was for over 20 years an active member of the First Baptist Church and a successful leader in the Baptist Chinese Mission School.

At one time Mrs. Tyler was one of Portland's well-known portrait and water-color artist, having for years a studio on Thirteenth street, and she had 13 children and one sister, Mrs. Carrie Warren Tyler, of Chicago, survive her. She had 17 grandchildren and was great-grandmother of several students.

Harry Tyler, the youngest of Mrs. Tyler's family, has been for years in the employ of Mann & Beach. Charles E. Metzger arrived with his wife yesterday morning from San Francisco. Miss Gerde and George W. Smith, of Granton, Wis.; Mrs. Inez Danglefield, of Capron, Ill.; Mrs. Carrie McQuinn, of Roseburg, Ill.; Mrs. Nellie Houston, of Los Angeles, Cal.; and Louis E. Tyler, a marine engineer, are unable to join the two brothers who are in this city.

At the meeting yesterday at noon it was decided that more time must be devoted to the work by the solicitors in order that the amount may be raised during February. Some of the larger amounts were subscribed upon the condition that the entire fund be raised. The amounts subscribed yesterday, and the names of the givers, are as follows:

TAFT REFUSES TO PLEAD

"Stands Mute" When Charged With Forgery in State Court.

W. H. Taft, erstwhile real estate broker and alleged forger, declined to plead guilty or not guilty when arraigned in the State Circuit Court yesterday morning. Making use of an obscure and rarely used privilege in such a case, he "stood mute," leaving it to the court to enter up a charge of not guilty. Thus Taft reserves the right to enter a plea at any time in the future he may see fit.

Lawyer McGarry hints mysteriously at unexpected developments in the case which will materially change its present aspect, and this probably accounts for the plea entered yesterday. The case will be set for hearing probably today.

While he was working for the company last June a piece of flying wood cut out an eye and he holds the company responsible for the mishap.

Diver Recovers Locomotive.

A construction locomotive, the property of Porter Brothers, a contracting firm who is building a portion of the North-South road, jumped its track at Fisher's Landing last Wednesday and ran in the river. The machine sank in 40 feet of water, and it was necessary to secure the service of a submarine diver to locate the engine. Fritz De Rock, a well-known diver of Portland, was called upon, and last Sunday he found the engine. The river at this point is very swift and the water was cold, but De Rock went down and fastened an inch and a half chain about the engine. It was then hoisted by a derrick scow and found in good condition.

REMARKABLY EFFECTIVE

Famous Doctor's Prescription Checks an Acute Cold in a Day and Cures Chronic Coughs.

The wonderful healing powers of pine have been known for ages, but the comparatively new form of pine product which has the quality of being solid, thus enabling it to be used in a more pleasant manner and which is now being generally prescribed by doctors, is known to the profession as Concentrated oil of pine. A Philadelphia lung and throat specialist declares that the concentrated oil of pine has produced remarkable results, often entirely curing a severe cold in twenty-four hours. This formula is very simple, and any good prescription druggist can mix at home. It is as follows: Mix a half ounce Concentrated oil of pine with two ounces of glycerine and a half pint of good whiskey; shake it thoroughly, and use in tablespoon doses every four hours.

This can be avoided by making sure to get the "Concentrated" oil of pine. It is also said to be a splendid specific for rheumatism and lumbago. For this purpose it is taken raw on sugar, a few drops each night and morning. No family medicine chest should at any time be without this powerful remedy.
