William H. Sherwood in Piano Recital

The second recital of William H. Sherwood, in which he was assisted by Mrs. Alice H. Marshall, was given at the Unitarian chapel last night, with a complete change of programme. The inclement weather had its effect upon the attendance, but the audience was appreciative if small.

Mr. Sherwood appears to please young teachers and pupils in every respect, but there is a lack of smooth execution in the more brilliant numbers which is somewhat disappointing to the public at large. In delicate work, and especially in runs, he exhibits care, temperance and shows his master hand, but in loud and brilliant passages he not infrequently sturs final notes and sacrifices detail to produce startling finales.

charging him with disorderly conduct. According to Eberhard, Roach has been in the habit of calling up the coal company office and ordering coal sent to different residences and collect. On its arrival at the destination named, the driver was informed that no such order had been issued. The places selected by the person who sent in the orders was usually the home of a preacher. Eberhard became convinced that his former driver was the guilty party and yesterday swore out the warrant for his arrest.

Some butchers today are too thick-headed to realize the benefits of GOVERNMENT INSPECTION OF MEATS--It's easier to be careless. In those states and cities that insist on inspection of meats the butchers have come to welcome and like the change. We quote the following from a late issue of "COLLIER'S." CAREFUL as New York is of its meat supply, the city receives from fifty thousand to one hundred thousand pounds of meat a day that is never seen by an inspector. Farmers, with their exemption from the provisions of the Federal law, kill sick animals, and even send in, to be made into sausage, carcasses of animals that have died a natural death and been promptly skinned. Shall Portland risk the lives of her people longer by allowing uninspected meats to go on the family tables? When you buy meats at the HARRY WOOD MARKET you know what you're getting--Healthful, wholesome, Government Inspected Meats.
