HOT WORDS FLY AT POLITICAL RALLY

Rival Candidates for Council in Sixth Ward Give Zest to Meeting.

MANN ACCUSES BELDING

Says Present Councilman Is Tool of Corporations, and Belding Replies in Kind-Devlin Opens the Campaign for Mayor.

Yes, the municipal campaign is oper it was opened last night, and with fire-works, blue, brown and brindle. If any one doubts it he should have been at Artisans' Hall when the South Portiand Republican Club gave its formal raily. with speeches, songs, and verbal hot shot. Like all well-regulated meetings, the best was saved for the last and it was John M. Mann, candidate for Councilman of the Sixth ward, who furnished the real fireworks of the evening. Mann opened his political thunder on Councilman Beldman who is eaching to the certain by openly ing, who is seeking re-election, by openly accusing Belding of being backed by the Portland Gas Company and kindred cor-

Mann began his pyrotechnics by de-scribing how the City Council granted a scribing how the City Council granted a saloon license for a saloon at the curner of Fifth and Sheridan streets, after a remonstrance had been signed by more than 300 residents of the neighborhood. This was a direct shot at Councilman Belding and Mann accentuated his remarks when he turned to the platform, upon which the speakers of the evening were seated, and sald:

"The man who could have prevented

"The man who could have prevented the granting of that license and did not, the granting of that hebias and the said on this platform tonght," and he looked straight at Belding. Councilman Belding's friends were on hand and the accusation did not hit the high score with them. The real hot shot came when

"I know that in making this fight for Councilman of the Sixth ward I will have the Portland Gas Company against me, the liquor dealers, the Portland Gegme, the liquor dealers, the rottain our serial Electric Company and Oskar Huber, and I want to tell you if I am elected you will never hear that I am a member of the 'solid nine' or that any corporation can buy me Another thing I want the voters of the Sixth ward to know and believe, and that is, I will do what has not been done for the ward and that is not been done for the ward, and that is Councilman Belding Replies.

Mann's warm words brought Council-man Belding to his feet and for several minutes both Belding and Mann held the platform and just about the time that things were about to degenerate into per-sonalities, some one called for a song from "Summers." one of the colored mu-sicians of the graphys. Things did not from "Summers." one of the colored musicians of the evening. Things did not even simmer down after the song, for once more Mann got possession of the floor and made his charges more direct.

"I know, and can produce the proof." he said, "that this man," polyting to he said, "that this man," polyting to Councilman Belding, "is owned body and soul by the Portland Gas Company, the Portland General Electric and Oscar Huber."

Would Treat All Alike, bard no time to play to the galleries was required to exercise the judicia units. If elected, he would, he said, the city a clean, honest and efficient ministration. He said he was friend labor in its organized capacity, but not the candidate of any class, and treat every man with equal justice.

Here Councilman Belding broke in.
"Gentlemen," he sald, "I want to answer the statements made by Mr. Mann. I am not owned by any corporation, and right here I want to tell you of a proposition this man made to me less than three weeks ago. He came to me and wanted me to withdraw from the race, and asked me to run as Councilman-at-large. He told me that he had all of the corporations behind him and that he could get them to help me. I refused,"
"I admit this," said Mann, breaking in "I admit this." said Mann, breaking in on the speaker. "I'll admit all this man says; but I made the offer to him just to draw him out, and I did. !—"

sharply on the table, and, not only the speakers were hushed, but also those in the crowd who were howling at the top of their voices, "Belding, you're all right."

But the end was not yet. After the meeting had practically broken up, Belding approached Mann and accused him of being A. L. Mills' candidate. Once more Mann took possession of the stand and got the attention of the few remaining voters long enough to give the names of the corporations that were against him, and added the First National Bank and the name of Mr. Mills to the list.

This was the discordant note of the meeting. W. P. Lillis, president of the club, presided. Several hundred voters, not all from the Sixth Ward, but from other parts of the city, were on hand to listen to the firing of the first campaign common and to see the various candidates on parade. Thomas Devlin, candidate for on parade. Thomas Deviln, candidate for Mayor, was one of the principal speakers of the evening, and on the speakers platform with Mr. Deviln were J. P. Kavanaugh and W. R. McGarry, candidates for City Attorney; A. L. Barber and Oscar Miller, candidates for City Auditor, and a number of others.

The crowd present had the time of their lives smoking good cigars, both before and during the meeting. One noticeable thing was the absence of liquid refreshments. The meeting was held in a

He said that he was not the candidate of any interest or faction and if elected would be in position to administer the affairs of the city in the interest of all the people. Mr. Devlin admitted that by request he had written a letter to the labor party in which he subscribed to the theory of municipal ownership of public utilities under conservative methods of acquiring them as set forth by the Labor Party, and other planks of the scribe to the whole platform for reasons stated in his letter, that he had no studied or investigated many of its prinstudied or investigated many of its principles and was not qualified to approve or disapprove of this part of the platform.

W. R. McGarry followed Mr. Devlin and began his speech by answering the charges made against him, that he was not eligible to hold the office of City Attorney under the city charter because he had not been born in Portland. Mr McGarry took a fling at the city charter, referring to it as an infamous piece of legislation. He said he was not born in Portland he was not an outlaw. He told what his platform was and declared that Portland he was not an outlaw. He told what his platfrom was and declared that if he were nominated and elected nobody in any building in the city would write his opinions or own him. "And," he continued, "if I am elected I am going to make some of the laws on the statute books effective or make it so hot for those who put them there that the laws will be repealed. I came here tonight so that you could get a look at me, and I want you to hear me say that I am pledged to no one. I have made no promises, only the one that I am making to you tonight, and that is I will ing to you tonight, and that is I will obey the law and see that the law is obeyed, not by one man or class of men, but by all."

At the Cathedral, the sermon on Easter morning will be preached by Rev. Father Joseph Gallagher, and the subject will be "The Holy Eucharist." The high mass will be at 11 o'clock, and Archbishop Christie will officiate.

The subject for the sermon at the Trinity Episcopal Church has not yet been decided. In both Catholic and Episcopal Churches a large number of people always receive communion on Easter morning, and those who partake of the sacrament only once a year always go on this day.

This morning at the Cathedral, Arch bishop Christie will officiate at the ser vices and Father O'Hara will preach.

SERVICES TODAY FOR CATHO-LICS AND EPISCOPALIANS.

Special Attention Paid to Holy Thursday, Good Friday and Holy Saturday.

Today is the first day of Holy Week proper. Although the week of sorrow and atonement is supposed to begin on Palm Sunday, the Holy Week services begin today. The Tenebrae, a set of psalms and quotations from the Hebrew prophets, will be chanted tonight in all Roman Catholic Churches, and various symbols and ceremonies, significant of the suffering and death of Christ, will be suffering and death of christ, will be suffering and death of christ, will be solemnized throughout the country. The Catholic and Episcopal are the only sects which pay very much attention to Lent and which have any special services for Holy Week.

In church circles, today is known as Holy Thursday, tomorrow as Good Friday and Saturday as Holy Saturday. In the Carbolic Church only one mass can the Catholic Church, only one mass can be said in one church, and in the Cathedral and all other Catholic Churches in the city it will be at 8 A. M. books, and the most of the day is taken up in meditation and prayer.

One of the most beautiful services in the Catholic Church today is the ceremony of the candles. In this, 13 candles in a triangular candlestick are placed on the altar, and with the exception of one they are all extinguished. This last candle represents Christ, and is not extinguished, but is taken behind the altar, symbolizing that death overcomes every one, but has no power over Christ. In the Episcopal Church, tomorrow, there will be services from noon till 3 o'clock, to commemorate the three hours Christ remained on the cross, and in the evening there will be special musical services. CATARRH usually occurs in the Throat and Nasal passages, and is an affection which causes irritation, inflammation and soreness of the mucous membranes. To cure the disease and prevent recurrence it is necessary to antiseptically cleanse and heal the affected parts. DR. PORTER'S ANTI-SEPTIC HEALING OIL is a Household Surgical Dressing, which is most effi-cient for the cure of Catarrh, because of its wonderful antiseptic or cleansing and healing properties. It can be read-ily sprayed into the Throat and Nose with an Atomizer, and as it is in the form of an Oil, it does not simply vaporize and pass off, but it goes directly to the seat of the trouble. The beneficial effects of the preparation will be noticed immediately, and the most stubborn chronic cases of Catarrh can be cured after a short treatment. Nearly all druggists now sell DR.
