WIDE STREET NOT LOST .- H. B. Dickinson is not dismayed by the organization of the Protective Club to oppose the wid-ening of Villa avenue to 80 feet and favoring a 60-foot street. "I think those voting a 90-foot street. I think those who are opposing the wide street," said Mr. Dickinson, "and threatening to carry the case to the Supreme Court, do not understand the situation. Nobody's property will be taken for this wide street. The law is very clear on this point. All damages will have to be paid in full. Along Villa avenue there is a great deal of vacant land, more than two-thirds of it being unimproved. There is a long stretch that would be called on to help pay damages, and nobody would suffer loss. Another thing must be taken into consideration, and that is that a 60-foot street cannot be opened through the Ladd farm. The Ladd estate will open an 80-foot street, but not a 60-foot street. SPEAKERS DO NOT AGREE

Dissension Develops at Patrick H. Scullin's Peace Meeting.

The mass meeting at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium last night to boost the plan of Patrick H. Scullin to bring about arbitration as a means to settle labor troubles failed to bring about the peace conference the promoters wished. When the meeting broke up, after a number of diverse opinions had been expressed, the objects sought were farther away than ever. farther away than ever.

Wallis Nash presided and Mr. Scullin explained the plan of a general remoulding of the present scheme of things until all should be as peaceful as a Summer's day. A number of Portland ministers, Rabbi Wise, Dr. Clarence True Wiison and Rev. E. S. Muckley, followed in the same atrain and expressed the fervent hope that differences would cease and harmony pre-

Representatives of labor unions then secured the floor and tore the utopian project into thin tatters. W. J. Yarrow, organizer for the industrial Workers of the World and leader in the sawmill strike, declared arbitration offered nothing whatever to the working classes, and said it was utterly useless to even suggest it. J. Goldrainer followed and he too denounced a peace conference as wholly useless in adjusting labor troubles.

Chairman Nash still ashered to his belief that the readjustment of the present system of production would solve existing evils and voiced the opinion that arbitration between capi-tal and labor would aid in bringing about better conditions.

Speakers said that the ministers who had spoken knew nothing about the settlement of labor disputes, that their studies and their lives unfitted them for understanding the problem. There was no definite result of the meeting and it is not likely the peace proposi tion will be further agiated here.

HOME FROM GOLDFIELD. J. P. Shay Prefers Green Grass to Alkali and Gold.

J. P. Shay, a former Portland con-tractor, returned from a year's residence in the Tonopah and Goldfield mining districts last Tuesday. After living in that dry and barren country for a year Mr. Shay thinks Portland is good enough for him, and will remain here. Mr. Shay says Goldheld is a great mining camp, but the recent labor troubles there have there is a noticeable decrease in the cir-culation of money.
