BY ARTHUR A. GREENE. Something unprecedented happened at the Heilig last night. The audience persisted in three curtain calls after the last act. In a somewhat extended experience in local theatricals I never saw a Portland audience do that before. There were very good reasons for it, the principal one being that Walker Whiteside, his extraordinary little company and "The Magic Melody" richly deserved the compliment, Another reason for such an unusual procedure lay in the fact that the star and play came here unknown quantities and proved a revelation. I question if Portland has ever before experienced such an agreeable surprise. Those who were present were fairly lifted out of their seats with an enthusiasm that was heightened by a pleasurable feeling of discovery.

This is not to say that Whiteside is lovice. Not by any manner of means, He and Middle West for a decade. He has been a successful Broadway "Hamlet," probably the best American in the role since Booth. As a romantic actor he has for sometime enjoyed a decided vogue, but he is now on his first tour to this coast and until last night had never appeared here. Now he is unquestionably a local favorite who may hereafter depend upon a large following.

His exquisite performance as the strug-gling young violinist, the nameless genius, striving against all the odds of mischance and finally winning the hearthreaking fight, will be a delightful remembrance to all who see him in the part. It is the very refinement of the actor's art. In appearance, voice, gesture, temperament combination of these and other qualities which we call personality, Walter

Any young woman can try to act as a Any young woman can try to act as a boy, but those who can give a sensible interpretation of the trying part are as scarce as negroes in Siberia. Miss Felton was everything that could be wished for Last night she was an ideal boy. She took the part of Joe Pemberton, a bright little diamond, according to the programme. When a mere youth Joe leaves his mothers and sets out to find the men who were responsible for his father's who were responsible for his father' imprisonment, who is wrongly accused of mirder. By chance he locates the right persons in a Western mining camp and after many stirring episodes unites father and mother.

while Miss Felton has no close com-petitor for the first honors all of the other parts are well taken, Forrest Sea-bury is exceptionally good as Deacon

"For Mother's Sake" is a good show in good hands and deserves big patronage. It is full of heart interest, rich humor and also enough melodrama to make it exciting.

of the organization is on his mettle to do the best possible work.

"Sealed Lips." is a melodrama of the most strenuous type, full of brisk action, sensations and situations that start the thrills. There is not a time during the play when the pulses get down to normal. Individually the actors are closing the season in a blaze of glory. The patrons are loath to part with the Loric players and manifested their regard yesterday by the most heartfelt applause.

Warda Howard, the favorite leading woman is seen in dust roles, and has never done anything better. She is an excellent actress and will be sadly missed by the local multic. With More debt. by the local public. Miss Howard has been playing leads at the Lyric for more than two years, and few actresses have than two years, and few actresses have ever been more sincers and earnest in their profession. Frank Fanning's farewell performance is worthy of him, and meets with the fullest approval of his friends. Belle Barcus, S. M. Griffith, F. M. Clarke, A. C. Winn, Melvin Mayo, Lillian Griffith, Walter Ayres vie with one another to outdo all former efforts.

The scenery and effects are unusually good. Next week the Allen Company will move into the Lyric, and the present

Grand.

T IS seldem that such a uniformly good vaudeville show is offered in Portland as may be seen at the Grand this week. Yesterday's matinee disclosed the fact that the management has exerted much effort to please the people who come week after week to see the "vud" actors and their acts. The topline feature, according to the programme is Archie Boyd & Co., in a rural sketch called, "After Many &cars." This is a very well-acted piece of work on Boyd's part and the sketch itself is a pleasing one. It Is doubtful, however, whether it will com-pare with the aerial gymnastic turn of the "Three Ffying Valenteenes." This is one of the best acts of the kind, one could see in a long journey.

Emily Nice, a clever vocalist sings a number of catchy songs, Edmonds, Everson & Edmonds in their skit, "Only a Joke." have thrown together a lot of laughable nonsense and make a decided

The moving pictures are far and away the most thrilling and realistic the Grand has ever shown us. The subject is an adventure in the life of Daniel Boone, and It is worth anyone's time.

The Cosettas, European whirlwind dancers and Frederic Roberts in filustrated song are the other acts.

Pantages.

THERE is something refreshing about Pantages. Most of its acts are similar to those seen in the average vaudeville ouse, but there is always one redeeming feature so strong that it takes away any bad taste and makes the whole show enjoyable. At Pantages you are always sure of seeing at least one, and some-times two or three, acts that are as in-vigerating as a trip to Mount Hood.

Professor F. J. Horne and his educated dogs capture your absorbing attention this eck. The dogs amane you with the almany laughs as Rogers Brothers. dog is really funny. However, De Camp & Murdock, who present the comedictia, "Galatea," are not far behind Professor Home and his pets in the race for the first place. Their sketch is exceptionally good because there are several jokes in it that are as new as fresh paint. Bleycle Bill is bandy with his jariat and is also a trick cyclist. McCall Sisters mean well with their high-class singing selections and about all that can be said about George Armstrong, comedian, is that there is nothing to prevent him from being at large.

Leo White has a splendid 'illustrated song this week, 'Just One Word of Consolation." The moving pictures are the best that have been seen in Portland for a long time. One of the films deplcts an Amateur Night, and it brought down the ouse yesterday.
