front of a faithful old horse he had driven from the city. The horse stood still, attached to the wagon, for nearly two hours, as near as Deputy Coroner A. L. Finley could judge, with its head lowered, as though it felt something was wrong with its master, before the body was discovered by neighbors.

Hammond was well known here. Until three weeks ago he worked for Fleischner, Mayer & Co. He owned a large and very valuable tract of land where he lived, and also had a snug bank account. He was a bachelor and find two brothers, one living near Mount Hood and the other in San Francisco. The body was re-San Francisco. Justice Olsen Reads Law of "Hoss" Trades

Consults "David Harum" in Preparation for Trial Soon to Be Held

O construe the ethics of a horse shortly confront Justice Olson of the East Side Justice Court. A. L. Hellman yesterday began a civil action in this court to compel Roy Martin to trade back the horses that they ex-changed May 7 and also to recover damages and costs to the amount of $80. Hellman sets out in his complaint that he traded his own horse, worth tin's gelding; on the representation of Martin that the latter horse was sound gentle, well-broken and would drive single or double and had no had habits or defects of any sort. Not hav-ing $10 in cash, Hellman gave Martin his $30 watch and received from Mar-tin a nickel watch worth 25 cents. Hellman says the trade was not bind-ing until he had tried the Martin horse Hellman says the trade was not binding until he had tried the Martin horse and found him possessed of the qualifications as represented. Hellman says that he was badly worsted in the trade. When he hitched up the Martin horse he says he found the "animal was wind-broken, that he would not pull an empty wagon 30 feet, and that when hitched with another horse would lie down," and also declares that the only commercial value the Martin horse has is "what he will bring at a tannery or soap factory." Wherefore, Hellman demands that the trade be declared off, that he seceive back his own horse, which he traded to Martin, as well as his $30 watch and $50 to soothe his lacerated feelings.

Just what Martin will have to say in his reply is not known as yet, but Hellman says that Martin has firmly refused to trade back, as he is perfect.

refused to trade back, as he is perfectly satisfied with his part of the trade. Justice Olson is engaged in reading what David Harum says on "hoss trades," so he may be posted when the case comes to trial, Harum being considered a better authority than Blackstone in such cases.

FIGHT PETITIONS IN COURT

FRIENDS OF UNIVERSITY CON-FIDENT THEY WILL WIN.

Glaring Defects in Demands for Referendum-Warning Notice Has Been Overlooked by Grange.

SALEM, May 14-(Special.)-"It has been definitely settled that suit will be brought to enjoin the Secretary of State from filing the University of Oregon referendum petitions," was the declaration made today by Walter Winslow, a former student at Eugene, who has been taking an active part in the anti-referendum campalen. campaign.
"There are several points upon which the suit will be brought, and one in par-ticular upon which we are sure of win were asked.

The committee recommended the repeal of the ordinance providing for improving Clackamas street with gravel. Property owners along this street originally asked for a gravel street and the ordinance was drawn up to cover that character of improvement. Afterwards the interested property owners decided they wanted macadam. In order to make the proceeding entirely regular, the committee concluded to rescind the first ordinance and draft another to meet the wishes of the Cjackamas street people.

Complaining that street improvement weather, contractors representing not less than a score of street improvement, had communications before the committee asking for extensions in time of from 16 to 255 days in which to complete the work under contract. With but a few exceptions the requests were granted.

Ordinances calling for the improvement of East Twenty-second, Twenty-third, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fith streets. In Sullivan's Addition, were presented and approved by the committee. In each of these ordinances, the contractors are allowed four months in which to complete the work.

The law says that a referendum petitions done to signers that if they sign without being qualified they say sign without being dualified they sign without being
